Swarrow Indians Seeking to Reclaim Dutchess County Land

By TIM SCHUSTER

POUGHKEEPSIE

Indian Chief Arion Swarrow (at least he thinks he's an Indian) and his wife Morning Star have been working since 1943 to reclaim some 6,000 acres in Dutchess County as a reservation.

The reason we say he "thinks" he is an Indian is that the State of New York is not convinced; in fact the director of Indian Services for the state, John Haphorn, told The Freeman that neither it nor the federal government had even been able to authenticate the existence of a Swarrow tribe.

The Swarrows, now living in Utica, claim that Swarrow's grandmother (he is presently 74 years old), Celia Reed, and the Swarrow nation owned the property on Chestnut Ridge north of Poughkeepsie. Mrs. Reed died in 1822.

Speaking of the state, the chief says, "They can't show a deed for it. We've got the cemetery where grandmother is buried, that's our deed to the property."

Haphorn disputed that a grave constitutes the deed to any property, and recalled that he has been with Indian Services for 15 years and one of the first letters he ever got came from Swarrow on this same matter. In fact, he said, Swarrow has made similar claims to other pieces of property around the state, but he could not recall the specific areas.

In any event, New York State recognizes treaties with only the six Iroquois nations, and the Swarrows are not listed among them, he explained.

How does one qualify to be an Indian in New York State? we asked.

Special

The method is simple—if a person is registered in a tribal enrollment with any of what the state considers to be "bonafide" Indian tribes, he is an Indian. Haphorn said the state relies on tribal officials themselves to keep records of their members.

The history of the Swarrow tribe is obscure, but they are believed by some to be related to the Schaghticoke Tribe that once occupied Connecticut and Eastern New York.

Today, only 17 members of the Swarrow Nation are left, including Arion, Morning Star, and their six children.

"We died off because of mixed marriages, because we had to marry within the tribe," said Swarrow. "Morning Star is my cousin. That's why most of our children are not in good health." He defined "mixed marriages" as marrying close relatives.

To regain this property, said the chief, he needs a document proving his grandmother's death because she died without a will.

"Vital statistics says there was no such thing as a death certificate," he said. "They say they didn't have them back then, but I think they had them. The state has proof, but they're not going to give me nothing."

Swarrow feels he is too old to use the reservation, which, he says, is in "rich man's country." But he has plans for the land— "I'm going to give it to poor people to live right in the middle of millionaire country," he said.

According to a spokesman for the State Department of Environmental Conservation in New Paltz, the 6,000 acres on Chestnut Ridge comprise a privately owned cooperative hunting preserve. The only business that the state does with the owners of the property is to honor an agreement to patrol it during hunting season to keep trespassers and poachers out, and to maintain an eye on hunters.

PRESIDENT NIXON IS GREETED BY FLAG-WAVING CROWD ON HIS ARRIVAL IN MINSK. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Trouble at Summit Over Nuclear Pact

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Nixon told the Soviet people today in a televised address from the Kremlin that U.S.-Soviet relations have undergone "dramatic change," but many difficulties remain before strategic nuclear arms can be completely controlled.

Nixon thus seemed to confirm that his third summit in three years with the Soviets would not be fruitful in reaching agreement to control deployment of a new generation of multiple warhead missiles (MIRVs).

Earlier today he also ran into apparent trouble in efforts to work out with Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev an agreement on limiting underground nuclear tests.

Even before Nixon's talks with Brezhnev began, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters, "there will be no signing today."

Nixon spoke from the Green Room of the Grand Kremlin Palace. His words went out by radio and television to the 250 million people of the Soviet Union and were beamed to the United States and elsewhere by satellite.

"In these past two years, there has been a dramatic change in the nature of the relationship between our two countries," he said. "After a long period of confrontation, we moved to an era of negotiation. Now we are learning cooperation . . .

"We have many difficulties yet to overcome in achieving full control over strategic nuclear arms. But each step carries us closer, and builds confidence in the process of negotiation itself."

Nixon spoke just before a state dinner he hosted for the Soviet leadership. He and Brezhnev will sign a final communique Wednesday, then Nixon will fly back to the United States for a televised report to the American people Wednesday night.

Related Watergate stories on page 22.

Nixon's speech emphasized the cooperation the two countries have achieved since his first summit with Brezhnev in 1972. He said "we will meet again next year," indicting he is fully confident such summits have now become annual affairs and, apparently, that he will be in office despite Watergate to conduct the next one.

Nixon said the atmosphere of such meetings has become one of confidence rather than of crisis.

He also referred to the U.S.-Soviet alliance in World War II and to the emotional impact on him of a visit Monday to a Soviet memorial at Khatyn, a village near Minsk exterminated by the Nazis.

He said it moved him to reflect "that our efforts now must be directed not against any one nation or group of nations, but against the evil of war itself.

"The peace we seek to build is a permanent peace," he said. "Nothing permanent can be built on fear alone."

Nixon's talks with Brezhnev earlier in the day were delayed more than five hours while the two men conferred with aides in an effort to resolve the nuclear arms impasse.

Soviet sources had insisted all day that Nixon and Brezhnev would sign an agreement to restrict underground nuclear tests. But Ziegler ruled that out.

Talking to reporters as Nixon entered the Kremlin conference, Ziegler gave no explanation for his contradiction of Soviet predictions, but his statement indicated there were snags to overcome.

On Monday, Nixon drove in a motorcade through the rolling plains and thick forests east of Minsk to pay a somber visit to Khatyn, a town whose residents were massacred by the Nazis in 1943 and which now contains a memorial. Nixon left a handwritten message there, hoping for "a world of peace for the children and grandchildren" of the victims.

Minsk is the capital of the Byelorussia, whose president, Fyodor A. Suganov, told Nixon two million of that region's people died in World War II. Nixon's visit was on the 30th anniversary of the liberation from Nazi occupation.

The President is scheduled to leave for home Wednesday afternoon and make a televised report to the nation that night from Caribou, Maine.

His six-day-old visit to the Soviet Union, on the heels of his recent Middle East swing, was beginning to show on Nixon. He limped noticeably during his Minsk trip and, by the end of the day, appeared weary.

His physician, Dr. Walter Tkach, said the President "hasn't said a thing to me about" the phlebitis swelling his left leg —and "as far as I know, it's not bothering him."

Simultaneously with the last full day of Nixon-Brezhnev sessions, Kissinger and Gromyko were drafting the final communique to be signed by the two leaders before the end of the summit.

Nixon and Brezhnev referred the underground testing issue to technical experts last week, with instructions that recommendations were to be finished for them before Wednesday.

Feraca Elected President Of Kingston School Board

By CARL GRAHAM

KINGSTON

City Detective Joseph Feraca was elected Monday night to the presidency of the Kingston Board of Education for 1974-75.

Feraca, whose seat on the board had been challenged in court, defeated Mrs. Evelyn Corsones, an eight-year board veteran, by a 5-4 vote. Feraca takes over the post held by Harold E. Keator Jr., who did not run for reelection.

Feraca, whose seat on the board was challenged earlier this year by officials of the local NAACP chapter, had been ordered by the courts to either give up the Board of Education position or his city job, but Gov. Wilson recently signed a law allowing policemen and firemen to serve on school boards.

Although passed by the State Legislature and signed into law last month by Gov. Wilson, it is not yet known if the bill is retroactive, in which case it would cover Feraca. Feraca's attorneys are seeking a definitive ruling in his case.

Feraca was supported by Mrs. Marianne Darrow, Ward Todd, and the newly sworn in Fred Hoffbauer and Mrs. Doris Mulvin. Mrs. Corsones was supported by W. James Penrose, James T. Owens and Thomas Reynolds. Todd was elected board vice president without opposition.

After incumbent, Joseph Hill, was nominated for another year as the school district's attorney, Todd nominated Richard Griggs for the post. Reynolds objected, saying it was an appointment, not an election, and that a second nomination was out of order. Feraca agreed, and the board then voted down Hill's appointment 5-4 with Mrs. Darrow, Feraca, Hoffbauer, Mrs. Mulvin and Todd opposed.

Todd nominated Griggs again. When Reynolds asked board members to reveal why they had approached Griggs about the post, Feraca replied that Griggs had approached him. Mrs. Corsones said no one was supposed to speak for the board unless backed by a majority vote, leading Hoffbauer to ask if anyone had asked Hill if he was interested in another term. The board then tabled the appointment until Griggs can be interviewed.

Todd put forth a resolution to cut down on executive sessions, saying the board had been criticized for doing much of its business in private and that most matters discussed in the private sessions were not confidential. Owens objected, saying the resolution was identical to one already tabled by the board, but Feraca ruled it a new matter. Since it involves a change in board policy it was deferred until the next meeting. Todd's resolution calls for only personnel and other confidential matters to be discussed in executive session, with the definition of "confidential" to be determined by majority vote if there is a question.

Hoffbauer began his board career by calling for a halt in spending on the new high school site in Lake Katrine until test borings are completed on the soil there, and asked that the meeting be adjourned to July 18 to discuss test results. Owens said a motion to adjourn could not be debated "and this is a highly debatable matter." Feraca ruled the motion out of order and Hoffbauer then resubmitted it without the adjournment requirement. Mrs. Corsones, noting that test borings would involve the district's engineer and architect, called for the matter to be referred to the Building Committe which was approved. Feraca said he would make new committee assignments within a day or two and call meetings to consider Hoffbauer's resolution and the appointment of an attorney.

Mrs. Mulvin called for the district to hold five school board meetings yearly in outlying schools, which was approved. A schedule of meeting times and places will be announced later.

In other action the board named Superintendent of Schools Louis A. Salzmann as board clerk, with William Turcotte and George Washbourne as vacation time alternates; named Mrs. Rose Grant treasurer, Mrs. Edna Morgan tax collector, Gordon Craig auditor, and The Daily Freeman the official newspaper; set board meetings for the first Thursday of the month at 8:30 p.m. except for May, July and August; and voted to meet again on Monday, July 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the Crown Street administration center.

Five Are Indicted In Jail Assaults

KINGSTON

The Ulster County grand jury today indicted five inmates at the Ulster County Jail on charges of first degree sodomy and first degree sexual abuse in connection with alleged assaults on two Plattekill teenagers in the jail last Tuesday.

Indicted on the two felony counts were Willie Redd, 17, of 5 Wurts Street, Kingston, Percy Broadhead, 17, of Rondout Gardens, Kingston, Charles Martinez, 16, of Ellenville, Dino Bullock, 16, of 2 Post Street, Kingston, and Randy Coffey, 17, of Connelly.

Testimony before the grand jury concerning the alleged assaults on Gary Mott, 17, and Nelson Montero, 18, both of Plattekill began last Thursday.

The two Plattekill teenagers had been jailed during the early morning hours of June 25 after being picked up by Plattekill Town Police on charges of possession of marijuana.

They were allegedly assaulted by other inmates in cellblock D on the second floor of the jail while being held in the facility that Tuesday.

A friend of the pair, who had been arrested with them, but was released on bail early Tuesday, visited Mott in the jail on the afternoon of June 25 and was reportedly told of the assaults. He, in turn, reported the incidents to Plattekill Town Police and to state police.

Later that day Plattekill Town Justice Wayne Smith ordered Mott and Montero released in police custody after he learned of the alleged incidents.

In an interview with the Freeman the two victims of the alleged attacks told of several physical and sexual assaults occurring during the morning, afternoon and evening of June 25 while they were housed in cellblock D.

One of the youths said he screamed for help, but none came.

Of the five youths indicted today, four, Redd, Brodhead, Bullock and Coffey were awaiting trials on charges ranging from possession of stolen property to arson. Martinez was serving a 90-day sentence for criminal trespass.

Final Report From Special Committee

Athletic Guidelines Listed for UCCC

By STEVE KANE

STONE RIDGE

The final report of the Committee to Evaluate Intercollegiate Athletics at Ulster County Community College was released to the public today at a press conference at the Stone Ridge campus.

The detailed study, which included three pages of recommendations, endorsed the current athletic program at UCCC and moved it be continued with the modification of a "specific, written policy."

The committee, formed last fall by Ulster President George B. Erbstein in the wake of the UCCC basketball scandal, returned a voluminous document covering the school's athletic history since 1963. Among the key recommendations were the suggestions that the school continue to participate in the Mid-Hudson Conference and that a sub-commitee be established for the continuing review and evaluation of athletics at the college.

Gordon L. Kidd, director of Instructional Resources and Library Services at Ulster and the chairman of the Committee, stated that the purpose of the study was not to conduct an investigation on specific matters but rather to help provide guidelines for the future of athletics at UCCC.

Contained in the report are recommendations that coaches at the college be directed to make a greater effort to recruit Ulster County and contiguous county student-athletes; that a concentrated effort be made to inform all students, especially those from Ulster County, that there are a variety of financial aid programs available to poverty-level, low-income and middle-income families and students; and that the College Association's Board of Directors pay special attention to the scheduling of athletic contests both in terms of number of games, length of schedules and the proximity of games to each other.

The Committee further stated that it had found "no evidence that any coach ever promised any potential student-athlete the receipt of any monies from any funds whatsoever."

Citing the public's misunderstanding of the funding of intercollegiate athletics, the Committee explained that no county, state or federal monies and no tuition monies go into the athletic program.

"As far as athletics are concerned, all coaching salaries, all transportation expenses, all equipment expenses, all officiating costs, all costs related to the intercollegiate athletic program come exclusively from the College Association, and, therefore, from student activity fees which are above and beyond tuition costs. Thus, with the exception of the free use of college facilities for sports events, absolutely no monies except student activities monies go to support the intercollegiate athletic program."

In the report the Committee pointed out that the "College cannot legally deny a student financial aid because he is either an athlete or is from out of the Mid-Hudson area as long as he qualifies under guidelines established by other federal and state agencies."

In the administration of funds from these agencies the Committee found the college and its Financial Aids Office to be "accurate, legal and well above minimal standards."

In a statement that reflected back on the circumstances that precipitated the formation of the Committee, the document contained an endorsement of recruiting practices. The Committee felt "that the recruitment of students from outside Ulster County and contiguous counties is a very positive and beneficial point for the college as these students add to the heterogenous atmosphere of the college."

And in related comment, the Committee noted the small community response generated by the basketball scandal and concluded it had insufficient information to determine the impact of the college athletic program on the community.

Other recommendations suggested the Board of Directors of the College Association take a more active hand, especially in the financial aspects, of the intercollegiate athletic program, and that the new president of Ulster, Robert T. Brown, take the initiative in contacting the presidents of the other colleges represented in the Mid-Hudson Conference in order to attempt to reestablish conference-wide athletic goals and develop new policies.

In addition, a stronger, better organized intramural program was recommended along with consideration for the establishment of "club sports". It was noted that equal status was assumed for men's and women's athletic activities.

Also serving on the committee were: S. Robert Kelder, a member of the Board of Trustees and County Legislature; Dr. Theodore H. Wohnsiedler, chairman of the Division of Biology and Health Sciences; Joseph K. Schwartz, an Associate Profesor of English; Ann Gilchrist, an Assistant Professor of Political Science; Richard Katims, Assistant Professor of Political Science; N. Jansen Fowler, a Kingston attorney; Arthur Leo, treasurer of the College Alumni Association; and three students, Stephen A. Brooks, Darlene M. Dunn and and Robert A. Valdiviez.

Atkinson Defends Martin

Sees 'Hatchet Job' Against Sheriff

KINGSTON — Paul Atkinson, Liberal Party candidate for State Senate from the 40th Senatorial District, said today that he believes Ulster County Sheriff William B. Martin "is the vicum of a well-orchestrated political hatchet job."

Atkinson was referring to recent difficulties Sheriff Martin has encountered in the operation of the Ulster County Jail and the sheriff's department in general. A Republican, Martin has been nominated by the Liberal and Democratic Parties to run for reelection in November.

Atkinson said he met with Martin on Monday to discuss recent occurences at the jail, and to tour the Golden Hill facility.

Following that meeting, Atkinson said, "Because Sheriff Martin is his own man and cannot be manipulated, he has been targeted by some local political interests as somebody who has got to go. If they get away with it this time, everyone who occupies the Sheriff's office in the future will be subjected to the same type of pressure and clandestine operations."

Continuing his statement, Atkinson said, "We have been told by the Republican Party that corruption with their ranks is only to be found in a certain misguided few at the national level. But what is happening here to Sheriff Martin is ample evidence that our system has been corrupted at all levels."

While Atkinson termed some of the recent incidents — including reports of violence and sexual assault — at the Ulster County Jail "deploarble," he added that similar incidents occur with regularity at penal institutions in every community in the United States.

"Prison reform is the only answer," the Liberal Party candidate said, "but that means funds must be allocated. The same people who are after Sheriff Martin refuse to spend any money to change the current system."

Atkinson said that Ulster County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago and District Attorney Francis J. Vogt "are not interested in correcting the situation; they are merely interested in using Sheriff Martin as a scapegoat so they can get their own man elected."

Despite his defense of Sheriff Martin, Atkinson conceded that "There are many issues and areas where Martin and I will never agree, but what is happening now in Ulster County goes beyond the future of Bill Martin."

Atkinson also commented that it is his impression that some of the incidents that have occured recently at the jail appear to have been "arranged" by Martin's critics.

The 40th Senatorial District, which includes seven eastern and southern Ulster County townships, as well as the City of Kingston, is currently represented by Richard E. Schermerhorn, a Cornwall Republican, who is seeking reelection.

Jail Disturbance Quelled

KINGSTON — Five inmates overpowered a guard in the Ulster County Jail in Monday night and took over a portion of the second floor of the facility for about 30 minutes in an apparent effort to negotiate improvements in their conditions, a spokesman for the Ulster County Sheriff's Department said.

The inmates, including William Dueno, 21, of New York City, who pleaded guilty last month to manslaguther in the August 1973 slaying of a 37-year-old Bronx woman in Plattekill, were talked into returning to their cells quietly, the spokesman said.

Assistant Warden Willard Bound, who was called from his home to the jail at about 6:30 p.m. when the disturbance began, said today that the five inmates housed in tier B pushed past a guard who was taking a mop and bucket into the tier. Bound said the guard was neither assaulted nor injured as the inmates pushed by him.

Reportedly the bucket and mop were asked for to clean up water on the floor of the tier after inmates threw water at guards who were attempting to get a prisoner from another tier to return to his cell. Bound said he could not yet confirm that incident today, explaining that he was awaiting reports.

According to Bound, the five inmates unplugged television cameras in the walkways around tier B, but there was no damage. While describing the incident as minor, Bound added "it could have been big" had not other inmates been kept from leaving their tiers by a deputy who quickly locked them in.

Bound said he arrived at the jail at about 6:40 p.m. and talked with the five inmates for about 15 minutes. They wanted more access to telephones "and things like that," Bound said. They returned to their cells quietly, and there were no injuries, he said.

Several off-duty deputies and state troopers were called to the jail, but were not used to quell the disturbance, according to Bound.

Impasse in Negotiations

STONE RIDGE — An impasse has been declared in contract negotiations between the Ulster County Community College Faculty Association and the Ulster County Legislature.

Faculty Association President Keith LaBudde announced late Monday night that the group will file a notice of impasse with the Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) in Albany on Thursday. The Faculty Association will request that PERB assign a mediator in an attempt to resolve contractural differences between the two negotiating teams.

Monday's development follows the pattern of previous contract talks between the county and the teachers. The county declared an impasse shortly after the 1972 contract talks opened; a PERB fact-finder met with the two sides during the early summer; but it wasn't until late in the year, and only after bitter denunciations by both sides, that a new contract was signed.

The 1970 contract talks, likewise, reached the impasse stage. But they went far beyond that point when the teachers walked off the job for three days. A new contract was signed in early 1971, two months after the historic strike.

Negotiations for the latest contract began in early April. According to LaBudde, 10 separate meetings have been held between the negotiating teams for the county and the teachers.

"We've reached a stalemate," LaBudde said Monday night, "the county obviously is not ready to move. Our only recourse is to call an impasse."

According to LaBudde, the two sides have reached impasse on "15 to 20" issues.

The most important area of impasse, he said, is economics. He said the county's official wage offer, is "no salary increases" for the teachers next year; on the other hand, the teachers are asking for salary hikes totaling 30 per cent.

The contract negotiated in 1972 gave the teacher 4.2 per cent raise the first year and a 5.0 per cent raise the second year. According to LaBudde, the inflationary spiral has actually cost the teachers eight per cent in purchasing power over the past two years.

LaBudde said the county has also proposed that a "freeze" be placed on all faculty promotions; that the teaching load for faculty members be increased by three to 12.5 per cent; that department chairmen be appointed by the college, rather than elected by the faculty (an important concession earned by the teachers in 1972).

Dr. Gerald P. Gorman (D-City), chairman of the county legislature's negotiating committee, however, said today that LaBudde's assesment of the differences between the two sides is "not entirely accurate."

Dr. Gorman said the major point of contention is the ratio of professors, associate professors, assistant professors and instructors employed at the college. He said the county would like to establish a quota that places 30 per cent of the faculty on the full professorship level, 30 per cent associate professors, 30 per cent as assistant professors and 10 per cent as instructors. "I don't think the teachers are ready to accept a quota system yet," he commented. "They apparently want to think about it."

Gorman also said "it is not exactly true" that the county has proposed no salary increases for the teachers. "The matter is still subject to negotiations," he said, "but there has been a leveling off of growth at the college, and we're in a position of paying more money for the same amount of work. And we have to consider what effect a large wage increase would have on other county employes."

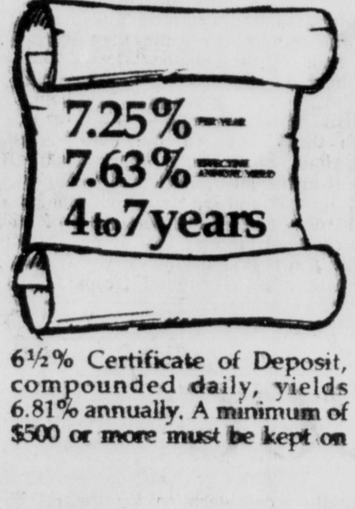

I think both sides left the meeting in good spirits," he concluded, "the dialogue is still open between the negotiators, and I think there is a great deal of optimism that we will reach a settlement without any great difficulties."

The faculty's current contract expries Agusut 31. LaBudde said he doesn't expect a final agreement to be reached by then. He said mediation should begin in "two or three weeks."

Providing an uncommon defense

One sure way to fight inflation is to make your money grow faster than inflation. Citizens of the united state of Marine Midland have three weapons to choose from, high yield Savings Certificates from the Revolutionary Bank:

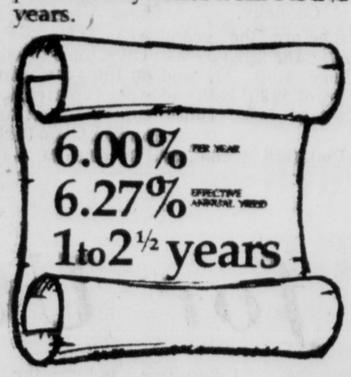

7¼% Certificate of Deposit, compounded daily, yields 7.63% annually. A minimum of $1000 or more must be kept on deposit for anywhere from 4 to 7 years. Your choice, within that maturity range.

6½% Certificate of Deposit, compounded daily, yields 6.81% annually. A minimum of $500 or more must be kept on deposit for anywhere from 2½ to 4 years.

6% Certificate of Deposit, compounded daily, yields 6.27% annually. A minimum of $500 or more must be kept on deposit for anywhere from 1 to 2½ years.

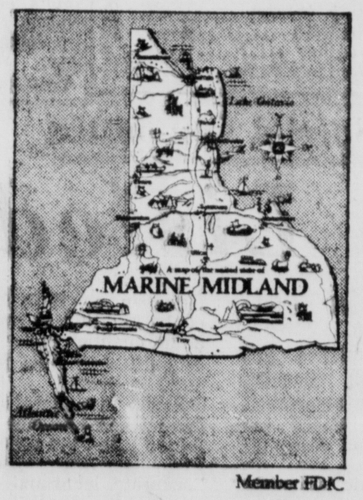

Of course, Federal regulations prohibit payment of such time deposits prior to maturity, unless three months interest is forfeited and interest on the amount withdrawn is reduced to the lowest savings account rate.

But, these high rates of interest are otherwise guaranteed to Marine Midlanders by the Revolutionary Bank, and your savings are protected by the FDIC.

Uncommonly high inflation demands an uncommon defense against this threat to your financial independence. Choose your weapons... high yield Savings Certificates... at your nearby Marine Midland Bank.

MARIA ESTELA, JUAN PERON
(UPI TELEPHOTO)

Argentines Mourn Death of Peron

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Crowds of Argentines massed in downtown Buenos Aires today to mourn the death of Juan Domingo Peron, a symbol of strongman rule in Latin America and one of the world's most charismatic leaders.

Thousands of Peron's "shirtless ones" filled the plaza in front of the Congress building in the early hours to be the first of his working class followers to view the body of the enigmatic and controversial president.

The 78-year-old Argentine died Monday of heart failure, leaving his 43-year-old wife, Maria Estela, a former cabaret dancer, as the Western Hemisphere's first woman president.

The new leader, Peron's running-mate in last September's landslide presidential election victory, was expected to have her hands full trying to run a divided nation despite pledges of support from key Argentine leaders.

Peron, who returned last summer after nearly 18 years in exile, died without achieving his cherished goals of national unity, prosperity and world prominence for Argentina.

His final year of power was marked by increasing guerrilla activity and bloody clashes between leftist and rightist "Peronistas," with both groups claiming allegiance to "El Lider."

Peron's body was to lie in state today in the Salon Azul (Blue Hall) of the Congress building before burial Wednesday at Chacarita Cemetery on the outskirts of Buenos Aires.

The government scheduled a mass this morning at the downtown National Cathedral for Peron, who died after a two-week bronchial infection aggravated an old heart problem.

Less than three weeks ago, Peron stood on a balcony of the Casa Rosada (Pink House) across from the cathedral and told 100,000 followers jammed into the Plaza de Mayo he would stay in office "until my last breath."

Peron's body may be taken later to a final resting place in a proposed national shrine, which would also hold the remains of his second wife, Evita. A bill passed by congress last week authorized the shrine.

The former strongman, who ruled Argentina with an iron fist from 1946 to 1955, was ousted in a military coup that cut short his second term as president.

Peron and Evita, an attractive actress who died of cancer in 1952, were the idols of Argentina's poor "descamisados" (shirtless ones).

His strongman economic programs, however, drove the country to the brink of bankruptcy and earned the bitter enmity of the upper classes.

The armed forces permitted an aging Peron to return home last summer in hopes of bringing unity to the divided nation. Peron cast off his old, fiery image as a Latin American demagogue, but failed to bring peace to the country.

He was felled for nearly a month by a heart attack soon after his arrival in Argentina sparked a bloody shootout among leftist and rightist followers.

The new president, often known by her nickname Isabel, sobbed as she announced Peron's death to the Argentine people Monday afternoon in a televised speech.

Mrs. Peron, who was dancing at a cabaret in Panama when she met Peron in 1956, called on God to "show me the way and give me the strength to fulfill the mission God and Peron have given me."

Named by her ailing husband as president last Saturday, she was to serve until the scheduled May 25, 1977, end of his term as chief executive. She received pledges of support from political, labor and business leaders.

'You Couldn't Move Inside' . . .

PORT CHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "The place was packed, you couldn't move inside," says a youth who claims to have been the last one to escape from a weekend discotheque blaze in which 24 persons died.

"You had to elbow your way through the people" at Gulliver's Restaurant on the night of the fatal blaze, said Jeff Bevino, 20, of Stamford, Conn.

" 'This is what it's like to die,' I thought to myself. 'It's all over.' I knew I couldn't make it any further."

But Bevino said someone in the crowd rushing towards exits from the popular teen-age night spot threw him against a door. A fireman pulled him out, but "Nobody came out after me."

Two days after the Sunday morning fire, only 16 of the 24 dead had been identified by Westchester County Medical Examiner Dr. Henry Siegel and a staff of six physicians and two dentists.

While they looked for clues to establish who was killed in the fire and other investigators tried to find out what started the blaze, a controversy was arising over how many people had been in the discotheque.

Straddling the New York-Connecticut border in this town of 25,000 north of New York City, Gulliver's Restaurant was a mecca for young people from affluent Westchester County and Fairfield County in Connecticut, which form one of the richest areas of the nation.

Bevino said the sunken dance floor, or "The Pit," was jammed with people dancing to the music of the Creation Rock group. An attorney for owners of the night spot said 200 persons were present, and other estimates have ranged as high as 700.

However, Mayor Joseph F. Dzaluk said the number present was well below the 313 limit fixed by "the strictest enforcement and interpretation of state safety limitations," which he said were Port Chester's "official bible" in lieu of any town code of its own.

He also said the six exits were twice as many as required by state law. He added that staircases leading up from the dance floor were wider than required.

"The building conforms and complies with state building regulations in the building construction code manual," said Dzaluk, adding that the discotheque passed a Fire Department inspection May 8 with no violations found.

Media Wants Public Murder Trial

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Lawyers for the news media say they will go to the Texas Supreme Court if a judge refuses to open to the public the trial of Elmer Wayne Henley, accused in the Houston mass murders.

District Court Judge Preston Dial, calling newsmen "a bunch of locusts," ordered closed-door jury selection Monday for the 18-year-old Henley, accused of six of the deaths of 27 teen-aged youths whose bodies were discovered last summer.

Attorneys for the San Antonio Express-News and the San Antonio Light, local station KENS-TV and The Associated Press and United Press International sent attorneys to protest the action. They are due back today to file a motion seeking the end of the secret trial.

If Dial refuses, as he did Monday, the attorneys said they will seek a writ of mandamus from the Texas Supreme Court ordering the trial opened. They also will ask Dial to end jury selection pending a high court decision.

A statement released by representatives of the five said:

"The U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly ruled that what takes place in a courtroom is public property. The framers of our Constitution distrusted Star Chamber proceedings and sought to bar them. We oppose this effort to carry out judicial action behind closed doors and pledge to appeal to the highest courts to insure the public's right to know."

But Dial contended that allowing newsmen to witness the questioning of jurors would contaminate the jury.

He also excluded Henley's mother, Mrs. Mary Henley, 35, from the trial, as well as Henley's brother, Paul, 17.

During the closed session Monday, five women and three men were cleared as prospective jurors. When 32 are selected, lawyers for the defense and prosecution will strike 10 names each, and the 12 persons left will make up the jury.

Before ruling that the public would not be allowed to attend jury selection, Dial told lawyers for both sides they must not talk to anyone about the case. The only information newsmen obtained were statements the judge relayed through court aides.

Court clerk Mildred Voelkel said Will Gray, a defense attorney, objected repeatedly to the public's exclusion but Dial overruled his protests.

The judge overruled a long series of motions by Gray, again refusing to delay the trial or move it out of San Antonio because of publicity.

He also ruled that nine oral statements Henley gave to police after his arrest last Aug. 8 could be admitted into evidence. In the statements, as recounted by police officers during January pretrial sessions in Houston, Henley told of gruesome sexual tortures and homosexual rape endured by the teen-aged males before they were killed and buried.

Henley was arrested in Pasadena, a Houston suburb, after he telephoned police and told them he had shot and killed Dean A. Corll, 33, who police said was the group's mastermind. That shooting later was ruled self defense.

Henley and another defendant, David Owen Brooks, 19, led police to three different burial spots in and around Houston where the bodies were found.

Teddy and Father Are Reunited

DUBLIN (UPI) — "Daddy! Daddy!" the boy shouted from a window of St. Vincents' Hospital when he saw Sen. Edward M. Kennedy step out of a car parked below.

"Hi, son," the Massachusetts Democrat shouted back, waving at his 12-year-old son, Teddy. "How are you?"

Kennedy took his son on a fishing trip to western Ireland today after the poignant reunion at the Dublin hospital, where the youngster underwent treatment for side effects of anti-cancer drugs.

The senator met with his son at St. Vincent's Monday following his arrival at Dublin airport with several members of the Kennedy family and Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif.

Teddy entered the hospital last Thursday when re developed side effects from drugs he took to prevent a recurrence of bone cancer, which caused his right leg to be amputated below the knee last November.

Kennedy hugged his son inside the hospital. Father and son then sat down for a two-hour chat and breakfast.

The two went for a drive, but returned to the hospital for another treatment before leaving on a five-day holiday in Connemara, a rugged beauty spot in western Ireland.

"The treatment is routine," Kennedy said.

The senator's daughter, 14-year-old Cara; his sister, Mrs. Pat Lawford; her three children, and Tunney were included in the holiday trip.

Teddy, who began to show side effects from the drugs during a cruise on the River Shannon with six school friends, had been out of the hospital only once since Thursday.

Doctors let the boy attend the Irish Sweeps Derby Saturday and Teddy won $7.20 on a 48-cent bet.

Final Respects for Mrs. King

ATLANTA (UPI) — A saddened community paid final respects today to Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr., whose body lay in state only a few feet from where she was shot to death by an apparently crazed gunman with a "religion all of his own."

Meanwhile, the FBI confirmed it had entered the case to investigate the possibility of a conspiracy in the Sunday morning shootings. Police said earlier they found no indication of a conspiracy.

Marcus Wayne Chenault, 23, of Dayton, Ohio, charged with murdering Mrs. King and a church deacon in a wild outburst of gunfire during services at Ebenezer Baptist Church, was held without bond.

Chenault, a short, baby-faced black man, was being held under heavy guard after telephoned threats on his life. He proclaimed at his arraignment on two counts of murder and other charges that he was on a divinely ordained mission that is "partially accomplished."

"My name is Servant Jacob," he said. "I am a Hebrew. I was on a mission and it is partially accomplished."

Police said Chenault told them Sunday he had come to Atlanta on orders from God to kill King, but shot his wife instead because she was closer.

Chenault's father in Dayton said his son had left home Saturday, "as normal as ever." Others who knew him pictured him as a loner, but as one acquaintance put it, a man with "a religion all of his own."

Police in Columbus, Ohio, where Chenault had been living, said they found a list in his apartment containing 10 names, mostly civil rights leaders.

Funeral services for Mrs. Alberta King, 69, will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Ebenezer, which her father founded, where her husband and famous son were pastors, and where she spent much of her life.

Services for Edward Boykin, 69, a church deacon slain with Mrs. King, were scheduled for Friday. Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., 74, stunned now by the third great tragedy in six years —one son assassinated, another son drowned and now his wife slain as she played the church organ across the crowded sanctuary from him — was reported "doing well."

$2 Million Sewerage Plant Contract

Saugerties Signing Set July 17

By TIM SCHUSTER

SAUGERTIES

After about three years of negotitations, the Saugerties Village Board Monday night set July 17 as the date for signing a $2 million sewerage plant contract with the town for Barclay Heights.

A representative from the State Department of Environmental Conservation will be present at the 5:30 p.m. meeting at the village offices, along with village and town officials.

Village Attorney William Brinnier told board members that "every request we wanted has been acceeded to by the town board," totaling some 24 requests in all, and he warned, "If this contract is not signed, we are in absolute violation."

The inclusion of the rapidly developing area of Barclay Heights, south of the village, into a sewer district has long been a matter of contract haggling. The village hopes to gain 85 per cent federal and state reimbursement for the expenditure.

The board heard a complaint from James Simmons, resident of Livingston Street, about the abandoned Rathburn factory adjacent to his house, and also addressed itself to the problem of what to do with the old Diamond factory located on the river.

Simmons claimed that the factory has 367 broken window panes, with windows boarded up with cardboard some time ago instead of plywood. He said the roof has large holes in it and claimed it had attracted a variety of animals, including rats, raccoons, and oppossums, skunks and cats. He also expressed concern about the potential fire hazard presented as it has been abandoned for "ten to fifteen years." The building is allegedly owned by Vernon Rathburn of Woodstock.

Attorney Brinnier said that taxes have been paid on the old factory, and from a legal point of view the board should solicit inspections for sewerage, water, fire, and health hazards from village and county sources before proceeding with any action. The board agreed.

The old Diamond factory, a much larger conglomeration of decaying brick buildings, has been the source of many complaints also, according to Mayor Vernon Benjamin.

He said there have been promises to clean it up to no avail, and back taxes allegedly owed amount to $16,000. The mayor cautioned parents not to let their children play near the old buildings.

Brinnier said that this matter could be pursued on the basis of unpaid taxes, and that the case could be "supplemented and buttressed" by the safety hazard angle.

Trustee Erika Hinchey proposed allowing town police to use the village justice's office next to village police and moving the village justice to the town building, thereby promoting a closer working relationship between the two outfits.

She said that amalgamation of the departments is inevitable, but that residents would benefit in the meantime by having both departments working more closely together, as is the case in New Paltz. The discussion was tabled.

Brinnier stated that papers are "in proper order" for signing a contract with BT Development Company to sell village water to the proposed shopping mall-motel complex just west of the village line.

It was estimated that the complex, when completed, will average 50,000 gallons per day water usage, with peak periods of 150,000 gallons, and is purported to be considering a payroll of about $2 million per year with 200 employes.

A check with village engineers was suggested by Trustee Walter Keefe to see how, if at all, water pressure might be affected. This will be done by the village clerk.

Keefe also reported that "it looks as if the Hudson Valley Firemen's Convention will be here in 1977."

Trustee Anthony Hackett said that Health Department inspection of the village beach this past week was not complimentary, with several violations cited, but that a re-inspection in a few weeks should find the village faring better as the first one was done at 9 a. m. before any village employes were on hand.

And it was resolved by the board, in accordance with a request by Trustee Hinchey, that no parking zones in the village be temporarily changed to tow away zones July 4th for the village's huge planned celebration.

School for Retarded Will Change Hands

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—The Cochecton School for the Mentally Retarded in Sullivan County, facing charges that its owners assaulted retarded residents, has been taken over by an association.

The State Mental Hygiene Department said Monday it has accepted a proposal of the State Association of Private Residential Facility for the Mentally Handicapped to operate the school on an interim basis until Aug. 15.

The association's president, Douglas Bannester, said his group offered to operate the school until Aug. 15 to provide time for the orderly transition of the school to new ownership or transfer of its residents to other facilities.

School owners Harold Levine and Edward Kurtzer as well as a school employe, Charles Trotti, were arraigned last Thursday in Cochecton town court on charges of assault residents. They have been freed on bail, according to Marvin Newman, chief assistant Sullivan County district attorney.

Levine and Kurtzer have agreed to relinquish the school's operating certificate on Aug. 15, state officials said.

The residents who were allegedly assaulted ranged in age from 17 to 32, Newman said. None was severely injured physically, but "mentally, I don't know," Newman said.

The school has been in existence for two years. Before that it was run as a camp.

The Mental Hygiene Department has been investigating the school for some time, a spokesman said.

Garrow Gets 25 to Life

LAKE PLEASANT, N.Y. (UPI) — Robert F. Garrow of Syracuse was to be transferred today from the Hamilton County Jail to the Clinton Correctional Facility to begin serving a maximum 25-year to life sentence for the murder of a teen-aged camper last july.

And in Syracuse, Onondaga County District Attorney Jon Holcombe was expected to announce what other legal action could be in store for Garrow.

During his trial, he admitted his involvement in three other slayings and several sexual attacks. The trial lasted more than seven weeks, with a month of that time used up in selecting a jury from the population of this rural, Adirondack county.

Garrow received the maximum sentence Monday from Hamilton County Court Judge George W. Marthen. The 38-year-old bakery mechanic last week was found guilty in the stabbing death of Philip Dombiewski, 18, of Schenectady.

Garrow, who remained in a wheelchair, told Marthen "All I can do is say I'm sorry."

State Police Investigator Backs Proposed Licensing Law

KINGSTON — Investigator Wayne E. Beyea of the New York State Police, has come out in support of the proposed law which would license second hand dealers and he urges all victims of burglaries to attend tonight's public hearing of the law at 7:30 p.m. in the County Office Building.

In a statement issued today, Beyea he said that while in most instances the persons comitting burglaries are being apprehended, the property they have stolen is seldom recovered.

Beyea explained that, even though in many instances the person arrested would tell the State Police where he had sold the stolen items, "a check of the business establishment, 'yes', I said business establishment, would fail to locate the property. The businessman could not recall the transaction and naturally no records were available to refresh his memory," he said.

Beyea said that in other instances the State Police have recovered stolen property in area businesses and when the proprietor was asked who sold it to him, he could not remember.

The investigator said that as a police officer he does not enjoy involvement in political controversy nor is he seeking notoriety. Police officers are charged with many duties among which are protecting your property, and arresting persons committing crimes against your property. This statement is being made for that very reason.

"Two years ago the Ulster County Legislature voiced its concern over the serious increase in the number of crimes against property owners," he said. "At that time they asked area police agencies what measures could be undertaken to remedy the situation. Sr. Inv. Michael Lisman and myself addressed the legislators at their request and pointed out the causes of these crimes. One of these being the easy market locally for disposing of stolen merchandise."

Beysa said that at that time they proposed that the most significant contribution the legislature could make to reduce these crimes was to pass a county law requiring all "dealers" in used mehchandise to require identification of all persons selling them merchandise and keep a written record available. The legislators voted unanimous support of such a measure at that time. Over the past two years many hours have gone into drafting workable legislation to protect you the home owner since that first meeting. Now that the final draft is complete and ready to become law it is in danger of defeat due to last minute grandstanding by a few persons. If this legislation is defeated to satisfy the whime of a few questionable profiiters, you the homeowner and honest citizen will receive a great disservice.

He said that at this particular time he can attest that the number of property crimes being committed in Ulster County is overwhelming.

I urge you the public who have been victimized by crime and are potential victims of crime to attend the public hearing at the Ulster County Office building and read the proposed legislation and decide for yourself whether it should be passed. Do not let persons who may be profiting from crimes committed against you decide the issue for you!

Meanwhile, Ulster County's proposed law has won the superlative "most punitive and discriminatory" from the Ulster County Conservative Party.

In a statement released by Attilio A. Contini, party chairman, it was stated, "We doubt that this law will promote the safety and well being of personal property as stated in the purpose of the law . . . This law will hamstring all local businessmen dealing second hand merchandise and bury them in a mountain of unnecessary record keeping."

Contini said that the law will not "in any way" alleviate the increasing crime problem, and suggested that legislators should see present laws enforced with maximum penalties given instead, referring to "lace panty judges who continually let the vultures loose to continue their life of crime."

Calling for a "realistic and sensible approach," Contini said the law would punish the honest businessman while the criminal is permited to run at large.

"Any new laws should be designed to punish the criminal, not the law abiding citizen," he said.

Legislature to Meet Tonight

KINGSTON — A special meeting of the Ulster County Legislature has been called for 7 p.m. tonight, by Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago (R-Dist. 8) for the purpose of establishing dates for public hearings on a new law increasing terms of legislators from two to four years and another to repeal a 1965 law regarding the annual county budget deadline.

The meeting will be held in the County Office Building prior to a public hearing on a proposed law which would call for licensing of second hand and antique dealers. That hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m.

Savago said that the purpose of the special meeting is to establish a date for a public hearing on Introductory Law No. 4 of the year 1974, authorizing the increase in the term of legislators from two to four years. At the June meeting of the Legislature, the board voted to place the question on the Sept. 10 primary ballot. Eight members of the 33-member board went on record at that time as being opposed to an increase in the length of term.

They claimed that two-year terms keep board members "on the alert and on their toes." Proponents of the measure feel it would improve the quality of service to the citizens of the county.

The board will also establish a date for a public hearing on Local Law No. 5 of 1965 regarding the Ulster County budget.

Previously the board created a local law which moved up the date for the submission of the prepared budget. Now the legislature would like to bring its own date in line with that of the state requirement which would move the date ahead, allowing for a couple of weeks more for preparation of the budget, Savago said.

A large attendance is expected at the public hearing on second hand dealers with those opposed as well as those supporting the measure asking to be heard.

Licensing Law Needed

That widespread burglaries have been a persistent bane in Ulster County cannot be disputed, and most area police experts agree that the avenue for disposal for stolen merchandise is largely through dealers in secondhand merchandise. The integrity of these dealers, it must be made clear, is not under question, but it is more than obvious that some sort of bookkeeping system, allowing authorities a means of tracking down stolen articles is something long needed here.

Tonight's county legislative hearing on the proposal to license all secondhand and antique dealers in the county promises to be a spirited one. Naturally, many of the businessmen affected by the proposed regulation have voiced strong vocal opposition to the new bill, claiming that the paperwork involved would prove an onerous burden in their operation and that their businesses would suffer. Along with the county-wide licensing, the above mentioned dealers would be required to keep detailed records very clearly stating who the sellers, and also a detailed description of the item being sold.

A proposal such as this one is overdue in Ulster County, and the burden placed upon the area dealers is not such a great one so as to make the new law unmanageable. Gun shops and ammunition suppliers have already been keeping detailed accounts of their transactions, and this method has unquestionably been beneficial to authorities. Records of the sale and resale of secondhand merchandise will also greatly assist the police in their attempts to minimize burglaries here.

Ambassadorial Plums

President Nixon did not invent the ambassadorial quid pro quo. Nor did any of his recent predecessors. The relationship between ambassadorships and political contributions has been in evidence for a long, long time.

The connection does seem to be rather more in evidence lately than in most times past. This impression is reinforced by a Senate Watergate committee report noting that more than $1.8 million came into Nixon re-election coffers from ambassadors. It adds that "six large contributors, who contributed an aggregate of over $3 million, appear to have been actively seeking appointments at the time of their contributions."

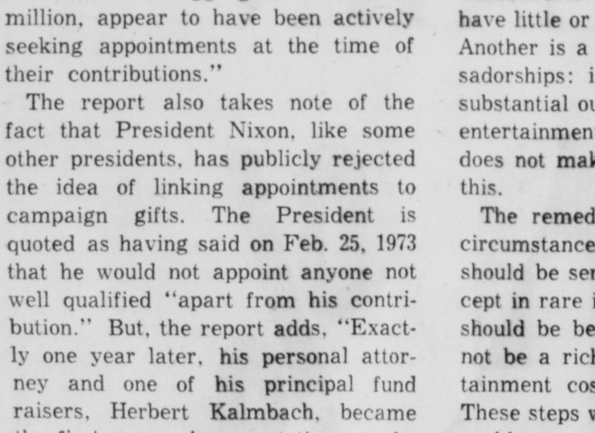

The report also takes note of the fact that President Nixon, like some other presidents, has publicly rejected the idea of linking appointments to campaign gifts. The President is quoted as having said on Feb. 25, 1973 that he would not appoint anyone not well qualified "apart from his contribution." But, the report adds, "Exactly one year later, his personal attorney and one of his principal fund raisers, Herbert Kalmbach, became the first person in recent times to be convicted for 'selling an ambassadorship.' "

Our point is that a bad situation exists, and has to some extent existed also in previous administrations. It is not enough to deplore this state of affairs. Thought should be given to its causes, and to means of curbing the ambassador-contributor relationship.

The light of publicity helps, but that does not suffice. Attention also must be paid to two relevant factors. One is the common practice of passing over skilled career diplomats in favor of businessmen and the like who may have little or no diplomatic experience. Another is a fact of life about ambassadorships: in general they require a substantial outlay of personal funds for entertainment, since the government does not make sufficient provision for this.

The remedies are implicit in these circumstances. Career diplomats should be sent as our ambassadors except in rare instances. Embassy funds should be beefed up so that one need not be a rich man to meet the entertainment costs of an ambasadorship. These steps would do much to solve the problem.

The White House Snooper Squad

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — There seems to be no end to the dirty tricks that the Nixon crowd played on their political foes.

We keep uncovering new incidents that the various Watergate investigators have never divulged. In recent columns, we have described political smear attempts against a dozen unsuspecting victims, ranging from the newsmen who exposed the My Lai slaughter to Sen. George McGovern's finance chairman Henry Kimelman.

When Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., visited Honolulu, for example, White House snoops tried in vain to catch him partying. When he was photographed in Rome with a pretty girl, presidential aides planted the picture in a national scandal sheet. When AFL-CIO boss George Meany went to the hospital with a chest hernia, a special investigator for the White House was assigned to get the medical details.

Now our investigation has turned up evidence that presidential probers also inquired into the drinking habits of Speaker Carl Albert and the late commentator Chet Huntley, tried to prove Sen. Hubert Humphery, D-Minn., had signed a racial covenant, ran a check on the financing of Senator McGovern's home and planted a "welfare spy" in the McGovern camp.

We have also established that the White House snooped into a Southern Democratic Senator's alleged ownership of a segregated apartment complex. Because we haven't positively pinned down the Senator's identity, we will omit his name. But there is strong evidence that the White House conducted additional investigations of Sens. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., and Quentin Burdick, D-N.D.

The White House tactic was to dig up dirt on these people and leak it to the press. A story was leaked, for example, on McGovern's real estate holdings. The White House also tried to verify the false story that Humphrey had signed a binding racial convenant on his home.

The snoop-and-smear operations were handled mainly by White House aides Charles Colson, John Dean, Jack Caulfield and Lyn Nofziger, with H.R. Haldeman pulling the strings from above. Nofziger became so proficient that leaks became known around the White House as "Nofziger Jobs."

While President Nixon himself never prescribed the tactics, he set the policy. He directed Haldeman in a series of memos and conversations to leak derogatory information against his adversaries and critics.

There are strong indications that the White House Keyhold Kops, for example, snooped into an incident at Washington's Zebra Room involving Speaker Albert. He left the Zebra Room after a number of drinks, got into an auto accident and tried to hush policemen by saying he had gotten them their pay raisies, witnesses said.

Haldeman later reported to the President, without going into detail, that there was derogatory information available on the Speaker. The able Albert has assured us he no longer drinks.

A similar undercover investigation was conducted into Chet Huntley's sobriety after he made some sharply critical remarks about President Nixon. An official investigation report, now in our hands, alleges that Huntley had "privately stated he was drunk at the time."

Nevertheless, the report goes on, the White House considered using the Environmental Protection Agency to obstruct a Huntley development project called "Big Sky" in Montana.

During the 1972 campaign, Nofziger planted a spy in McGovern's California headquarters to search for a special form that volunteers allegedly used to get welfare payments while they worked for the Democratic presidential candidate. For two weeks, Nofziger's stealthy "Welfare spy" rifled desks, files, and in-baskets for the mysterious form which, it turned out, never existed.

Nofziger also pressed for antitrust action against the Los Angeles Times whose reporters had written critical stories about the President. The Justice Department provided the White House with helpful information but never went ahead with the action.

Nofziger also sought tax information about the National Education Association. Documents in our possession show he planned to slip the information to a friendly Congressman who would criticize the tax-exempt NEA for "political activities."

But Nofziger was more scrupulous, according to our documents, than was Chuck Colson. When Nofziger was publishing the GOP newsletter "Monday," Colson tried to leak stories to him. Nofziger confided he killed the Colson stories because they were "of a questionable nature."

On another occasion, Nofziger warned Haldeman that their colleague Colson was going to ruin Haldeman. The Prussian-minded Haldeman, according to the documents, shot back a phrase that epitomizes Watergate:

"But he gets the job done."

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Watergate convict Charles Colson has been dropped from the impeachment witness list. Sources familiar with Colson's two days of secret testimony say he had no new information but merely offered his interpretations. The impeachment staff decided they didn't need the benefit of a Colson sermon . . . Admiral Thomas Moorer, the retiring Joint Chiefs chairman, is preparing to go out in style today (July 2). His retirement party will wind up, according to plans, with the overhead appearance of a dozen fighter jets headed by a B-52 and the aerial acrobatics of the Blue Angels.

Letter from George Wallace

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY Jr.

I have a communication from Governor George Wallace, which is addressed safely up the generic scale, "Dear Fellow American." In other words, the identical salutation could have been used to address Mrs. Martin Luther King, or the Boston strangler. We are all Fellow Americans.

But fellow Wallace supporters? The mailing wants to find out. When he was running for President in 1968 and again in 1972, George Wallace used to say — remember? — that there wasn't a dime's worth of difference between the policies of the two parties. This point he stopped stressing when the Democrats nominated George McGovern in Miami. It would have strained even his credibility, because everyone knew that there was at least a dime's worth of difference between Nixon and McGovern, in fact some economic statisticians put the difference at about a hundred billion dollars per year.

But now George Wallace is talking about the issues, and obviously it is his point that once again the Republicans and the Democrats are not easily distinguishable. He begins this letter — which, by the way, is a fund-raising letter — by asking his Fellow Americans to cast a straw ballot. "If the election were being held today who would you vote for: George McGovern, Richard Nixon, or George Wallace?"

But after the straw poll, Wallace lists five positions he feels strongly about. He plans, he says, to speak out on these five issues among others, preparatory to deciding whether to run for President in 1976. Here they are:

"1. I am concerned that in less than ten years America went from clear military superiority over the Communists to now being militarily weaker than the Communists." This Fellow American shares Mr. Wallace's concern.

"2. I am concerned that most politicians in Washington want to take a lot of your money and give a guaranteed income to people even if they are healthy and refuse to work." The formulation is a semanticist's delight, but if I had to vote yes or no even on the phony formulations, I'd vote on Wallace's side.

"3. I don't want the Democratic Party to repeat what it did in the 1972 Presidential campaign." That's a tough one for us Republicans. Strict honesty would require me to say that I wished the Democrats would nominate Bella Abzug.

"4. Inflation has been eating up your paycheck because the federal spending has dobuled in the last five years." That is a kind of fundamentalist synopsis of what happened during the last five years, but once again — given the alternatives I'd have to vote for Wallace, even as I'd have voted for William Jennings Bryan against Clarence Darrow.

Finally, "5. The politicians and political leaders have done nothing to stop busing even though the people's message is clearly against busing." Here Wallace is quietly lowering the collar of his sweatshirt, just enough to show the old tattoo. And it works. And it works for very good reasons. The American people — if you don't count Garry Wills, which is the safest exception — pretty well agree that opposition to busing is not a race-animated position, though this does not, obviously, mean that no racists oppose busing. The point is it is a politically hygienic stand to take nowadays, whereas once it was not: so that Wallace, making it now, in this preliminary attempt to crystallize American dissatisfactions, makes it without running serious risks that he will be roundly denounced as the Wallace of yesteryear who interposed his body between the University of Alabama and the matriculation of an 18-year-old Negro girl.

There are a number of interesting things about this sally of Governor Wallace, but surely the most interesting is that he has centered on five questions his concern with which is more characteristically a Republican's concern than a Democrat's. And yet it is the Democrats who have been most steadfastly wooing him. They do not do this because of the color of his beautiful blue eyes. George Wallace is what the boys in the smoke-filled room would call force majeure, if the boys in the smoke-filled rooms were all graduates of Camelot.

I would be surprised if Teddy Kennedy could be got to join a pilgrimage to Lourdes, if Madalyn O'Hair and three other First Amendment fanatics hoisted a single placard against the trip. But a pilgrimage to Montgomery, Alabama, to visit George Wallace — why that is becoming routine. As a matter of fact, I am surprised the Democrats in the Senate have not yet proposed rapid transit subsidies from Washington to Montgomery.

And yet the whole political business rests on crazy historical-terminoligical anomalies, surely? Isn't George Wallace subtly reminding people that he is at this stage of the game something of a right-wing Republican?

Daisy Chain of Inflation

EAST HAMPTON, L.I. — The summer circus is cranking up here in the green lush, where some of America's Waspiest richies will aestivate in fresh sea breezes while they practice the more refined forms of anti-Semitism on the well-to-do Jews who also come here. Neither on the golf course nor in the pool are the Anglo-Saxons easy to see, for the stockbroker conceals himself and his wife and children more cleverly than nature's shyest, best-camouflaged, nesting creatures.

Among themselves, however, they tend toward the boisterous. A weekend in the High Hamptons is 72 hours of unremitting alcohol and athletics. When they aren't bashing some kind of a ball around, they are descending on each other with their weekend guests in tow to drink whiskey on ice and say nasty things about their guests who, "if they had nice places of their own, wouldn't want to visit."

They sniff out each other's property and, being rich, they talk prices and money. Rent, buy or sell, after they've swarmed over the real estate and inwardly appraised their host's holdings, the conversation turns to the larger world of business back there in the heat of Manhattan Island, where the stock market languishes and the kids splash in the spray of fire hydrants. The tone of the talk is of the suppressed scream, of hysteria held in check.

It's not the little symptoms of minor undulations in the business cycle that is getting to them — cutting back from three yard boys to two, flying first-class instead of charter. They know how to ride out that kind of small surf. These haven't been hurt yet. It's the future they're worried about.

Even though the rich are always worried that somebody, God or a Bolshevik, is going to steal their money, this is different. The head of a medium-sized electronics company comes in after tennis for his drinkeepoo and remarks that corporate customers, who used to pay their bills in 30 days, are now taking 90. "There's no money — anywhere," he says, referring to the ever-recurring "liquidity crunch" which worsens each time it returns to be propitiated by the printing of more un-Sanforized mini-dollars. The daisy chain of debt without redemption has reached such proportions that in East Hampton they are drawing the same dark-day comparisons between now and 1929 that only radical economists used to make.

They've put their hope in the former fuel czar, William Simon. The new Secretary of the Treasury has taken a house here, which his neighbors point out to visitors while they reassure each other that, "Bill Simon is one guy who will take on inflation. He must be smart. Look at all the money he made."

Whether Simon was also smart enough to get that money out of investments whose value is being eroded by inflation isn't known now, but a lot of the people here haven't. They don't know where to put their money to save its value. They would be even more concerned if it occurred to them that the government may not be serious about its anti-inflation posture.

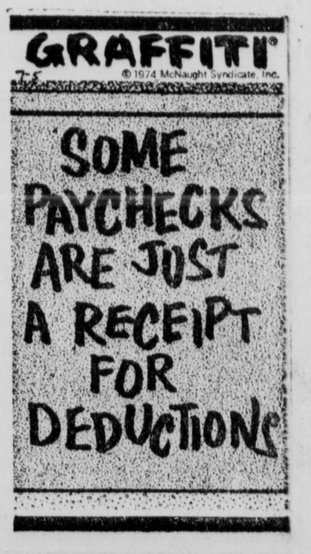

Washington is giving off signs of terrors at the consequences of any deflationary movement, of any drop in prices. Apparently it will be tolerated, so that we are to fight inflation while allowing prices to continue to rise.

With inflation at the 14 per cent rate, Mr. Simon and associates are laboring to keep prices up in the cattle industry. Emergency loans are being rushed through Congress, and the crustiest of free-marketeers will vote for it out of fear that, if the cattlemen go under, they will take their banks and other creditors with them.

Thus, with all this cheap money the shortage of cash, "the liquidity crunch," prohibits any drop in prices anywhere in any industry.

The government must foster inflation while seeming to fight it. Cattle, banking, railroads, housing must get money. The presses on which it is printed may have to run through the night, but in the morning the paymasters and tellers will have something resembling dollars to pass through their wickets.

It turns the economy into a vast Ponzi game. In the Ponzi game, the first people to buy the worthless stock are paid off with the money coming from the people who buy later. They're the ones who get stuck. The same with inflation. He who can borrow first and buy first with the cheap money robs him who must buy later. The folks here are always first in line, but where will you be?

Sky-Diving, Music, Fireworks Thursday at Dietz Stadium

KINGSTON

Championship sky-diving, rousing music, and the traditional thrilling fireworks display will be featured at this year's 18th annual Independence Day Celebration at Deitz Stadium, July 4.

Members of the Hudson Valley Sky-Diving Club will be thrilling the crowd of thousands with leaps from as high as 14,000 feet as they attempt to successfully land in the stadium.

The sky-divers taking part will include several holders of the coveted "gold wings," awarded only to sky-divers with more than 1,000 jumps to their credit.

Among the jumpers will be Al King, a veteran of more than 1,200 jumps, who recently participated in the national sky-diving competition in Oklahoma. Other divers expected are Stu Prakin, a veteran of over 1,750 daredevil leaps, Danny Miller, with over 1,640 jumps to his credit, and Bob Novak, a veteran of 1,500 jumps.

The skill divers are expected to make what is considered a difficult leap into Dietz Stadium look easy as they reach speeds of up to 250 feet per second during free fall before opening their parachutes.

The ever-popular Kingston Indians Drum and Bugle Corps, which has qualified for national competition with adult corps from across the country, will provide the music.

Some 8,000 persons were on hand for the big show and fireworks display put on by the Kingston Professional Fire Fighters Benevolent Association last year, and even more are expected for this year's celebration.

Gates at Dietz Stadium will open at 6 p.m., with the sky-diving and music slated to begin at 8 p.m. The fireworks display will start at dusk.

Gulf Up, Standard Down; Gas Still High

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline prices changed Monday as one major oil company kicked up its wholesale and retail prices and another major company lowered its prices.

The new prices were worked out according to the Federal Energy Administration's (FEA) formula for setting maximum wholesale and retail prices based on current crude oil costs, the companies said.

Gulf Oil Corp. posted a four-cent-a-gallon increase Monday, which some service station operators said they are passing along to customers according to the FEA formula.

Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) said it lowered its wholesale and retail prices two cents per gallon Monday.

The Sohio decrease applies to the pump price at company-owned stations in Ohio and to the wholesale price of gasoline to its subsidiaries, British Petroleum Co., Ltd., and Boron Oil Co.

Sohio's pump prices in Ohio fell to 55.8 cents a gallon for regular and lead-free gasoline and 59.8 cents a gallon for premium.

Sohio said dealers who operate the Boron and BP stations decide for themselves what they want to charge. Some BP dealers may not pass along the savings to the consumer, a spokesman said.

Gulf Oil Corp. said its station operators also set their own prices, but several Gulf stations contacted in the New York area said they had raised their pump prices Monday four cents a gallon.

Phoenicia Home Is Destroyed

PHOENICIA

Fire of undetermined origin ripped through a seven-room summer residence in Phoenicia early today, leaving only charred rubble in its path.

Some 60 firemen from the Phoenicia, Mt. Tremper and Shandaken fire departments were called to the scene off Route 28 west of Phoenicia shortly after 2 a.m. when neighbors reported hearing an explosion.

Phoenicia Fire Chief James Quinn said it is believed the explosion was the sound of the doors of the building being blown off after an intense build-up of heat in the structure due to the fire.

The building was owned by Evonne Taule of New York City, Quinn said. No one was in the house when the blaze broke out.

"The building was completely engulfed when we arrived," Quinn told the Freeman. He said fire officials have not been able to determine the cause of the blaze, but added it is not believed the fire was of suspicious origin.

No injuries were reported to firemen.

Fire fighters were at the scene until nearly 5:30 a.m.

State Indicts Mobil Oil On Threats Against Dealers

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Oil Corp. was indicted by a state grand jury Monday on charges that it threatened dealers with loss of their leases if they refused to sell Mobil tires, batteries and accessories exclusively.

A grand jury impaneled at the request of state Atty. Gen. Louis J. Lefkowitz charged that certain Mobil agents and employes tried to coerce dealers in four countries not to sell products of other companies.

It charged the company with interfering with "the free exercise of business activities of certain of its dealers" and said Mobil's prices for product's "were higher . . . than the prices for which such articles could be purchased elsewhere."

Commenting on the indictment, a Mobil spokesman said it was "the third lawsuit in two years the attorney general has pressed against Mobil making the same shopworn accusations . . ."

The indictment charged Mobil with making an arrangement in restraint of trade and competition, a violation of the state's general business law.

If convicted, Mobil could face a possible fine of $50,000.

Mayor Signs Bike Ordinance

KINGSTON

Mayor Francis R. Koenig has signed Kingston's first bicycle ordinance, requiring the registration of all bicycles owned by city residents.

Koenig signed the legislation on Monday following Thursday's public hearing at city hall where city police came under criticism for not enforcing current bicycle ordinances.

There was also some criticism about the lack of training for youngsters which Koenig answered by claiming "Stanley the Talking Bicycle" was a city program. That particular program is sponsored by the Kingston Lions Club although City Police Officer Richard Scherer offers it in area schools.

Koenig was not available for comment today on how the new ordinance will be implemented. It officially took effect with the mayor's signature on Monday.

Koenig has notified the Common Council for its meeting tonight that he has reappointed Edward Parker on Pettit Avenue to a five-year term on the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency.

The aldermen meet at 7:30 at city hall with requests for some $190,000 in appropriations topping the agenda. The fire department wants $112,000 for a new fire truck for Central Station while the public works department seeks some $76,000 for streetwork.

The aldermen will also hear an address by Edwin Ford on the old city hall at 408 Broadway.

All directors are urged to attend. The meeting is open to the public.

In June, there were 459 new claims and 493 reopened existing claims, plus 108 people opened "extended" claims to benefit from the additional 13 weeks approved on top of the original 26.

The department processed 7,544 checks for payment in June, or about 1,900 a week. The figures for last July show that 5,823 checks were distributed.

Financial and Commercial

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices weakened slightly in the stock market today under the subduing influence of an uncertain interest rate outlook.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was fractionally lower, and losers led gainers by a 4-3 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said Wall Street had drawn some encouragement from the decision Monday by the First National Bank of Chicago not to raise its prime lending rate from the 11.8 per cent level it had reached the week before.

But they noted continuing wariness as short term open market money rates seemed to be continuing their recent resurgence.

Today's prices on the Big Board included Exxon, steady at 70⅜; Archer Daniels Midland, down ¼ at 15⅝; Eli Lilly, up ⅛ at 77¾, and Sperry-Rand, down ¼ at 37⅜.

Quotations by Loeb, Rhoades and Co., members of New York Stock Exchange and American Stock Exchange, Kingston Plaza, Kingston, N. Y. Joseph Garvila, resident manager. Phone 331-1900.

Controversy Over Campaign Finance Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Controversy erupted after a House committee reversed itself and approved a broad campaign finance reform bill including public bankrolling of presidential primaries.

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., sponsor of the primary funding provision, on Monday termed the measure "a good bill, a strong bill, a defensible bill."

But Common Cause, the self-styled citizens lobby, attacked it as "loophole-ridden legislation which places members of Congress firmly in control of campaign finance law enforcement."

And there were promises of floor fights on the bill's public financing and enforcement provisions.

The primary funding proposal had been turned back Friday by a 16-9 vote of the House Administration Committee. But Monday they approved it 15-10 and went on to approve the bill 21-0.

"Members had more time to reflect," Brademas said of the switch. "The provision makes for a much stronger bill."

The committee originally approved taxpayer bankrolling of the 1976 presidential campaign of up to $20 million for each major party ticket. It rejected public financing for congressional elections. It would provide $5 million in matching funds for presidential primary candidates in 1976.

The Senate has approved public financing for congressional and presidential primaries and general election campaigns.

The committee proposal and bills already passed by the Senate have several provisions in common which would:

—Limit cash contributions to $100.

—Establish for the first time limits on congressional and presidential campaign spending and individual and group contributions to any and several candidates.

—Create streamlined candidate election organizations with disclosure rules intended to make tracking of violations much easier.

Both bills would allot, for the first time, $2 million from the taxpayer checkoff fund for each party's nomination conventions.

The Senate created in its bills an independent supervisory commission with its own lawyers and powers of prosecution to enforce the new law.

House committee members reworked the current supervisory setup, adding four congressmen to a list of congressional employes. Congress itself could veto any proposed regulations of the board created in the House bill.

This provision has been attacked as cosmetic, and leading to velvet-gloved handling of Congress by Congress. In addition, any advisory opinion of the board would virtually eliminate prosecution of a candidate who asked interpretation of the law; and any investigation of a violation is secret, unless the alleged violator consents to disclosing it.

Judge Rules Against Penn Central

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — U.S. District Court Judge John P. Fullam ruled Monday that the bankrupt Penn Central Railroad cannot be reorganized under the new Regional Rail Reorganization Act because parts of the act are unconstitutional.

In a separate development, the Penn Central was reported to have suffered a net loss of $9.9 million for May of this year, lmost half that of May, 1973.

Fullam, who stayed his order pending appeals to the Supreme Court, also ruled that the Lehigh Valley Railroad could not reorganize under the act.

The judge's order followed by a week a similar finding by a three-judge panel, of which Fullam was a member, that the act did not adequately compensate stockholders and creditors of the bankrupt railroads while a new Consolidated Rail Corp. was being put together.

Conrail, as called for in the rail reorganization act, would be a combination of bankrupt Northeastern and Midwestern railroads, including the Penn Central and Lehigh Valley.

Following the panel's decision, the Transportation Department announced it would appeal the ruling directly to the Supreme Court. Penn Central trustees also were expected to file an appeal.

In his order, Fullam did not mention the possibility of liquidating the massive Penn Central.

In a related order, U.S. District Court Judge J. William Ditter ruled that the bankrupt Reading Railroad should be reorganized by transferring some of its railroad properties to Conrail.

"There is a vast disparity between the value of Reading assets that may go to Conrail and those that may be transferred from the Penn Central," Ditter said. "Thus, the constitutional question of whether there is any assurance that those assets will be paid for is not the same to both railroads."

The Penn Central's trustees announced that the May loss was $9,989,002, 46.5 per cent less than the May 1973 net loss of $18,680,720.

PUBLIC NOTICE
STATE OF NEW YORK
PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION
AND
DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL CONSERVATION

NOTICE is hereby given that an emergency hearing will be held before Joseph C. Swidler, Chairman of the Public Service Commission, and James L. Biggane, Commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation, or their delegates, at 10:00 a.m. on August 6, 1974 at the Public Service Commission's offices at 44 Holland Avenue, Albany, New York, upon the application for an extension of the exception granted by the State on April 9, 1974 to Cirillo Brothers Petroleum of Albany, Inc., Port of Albany, Albany, New York from the sulfur requirements for No. 6 Fuel Oil it may sell and its customers may burn in numerous upstate locations. Cirillo Brothers of Albany supplies an area by truck out of Albany in the circumference surrounded by Hudson, Ancram, Berlin, Cambridge, Glens Falls, Warrensburg, Utica, Cooperstown and Kingston. It also serves one location each in Oneonta, Elmira, Syracuse, Indian Lake and Newton Falls. In addition, it supplies No. 6 Fuel Oil to Rochester. The exception granted by the Commissioner of Environmental Conservation expires on June 30, 1974. This exception authorizes Cirillo Brothers to sell nonconforming fuel oil: the wholesale customers of Cirillo Brothers covered by 6 NYCRR Part 226 to resell the fuel oil to their retail customers and permits the retail customers of both Cirillo Brothers and Cirillo Brothers' wholesalers to use the nonconforming fuel oil. The present application seeks an extension of this exception.

The restrictions on sulfur content for fuel which may be burned in the previously named locations are contained in Volume 6 of the Official Compilation of Codes, Rules and Regulations of the State of New York (6 NYCRR), Part 226. The aforementioned regulations require that the Chairman of the Public Service Commission certify an insufficiency of fuel supply conforming to the restrictions to the Commissioner of Environmental Conservation before he shall consider such application. Federal Regulations require a hearing on variances requested. 40 CFR 51.4, promulgated pursuant to the Clear Air Act, 42 USC 1857-1957L, as amended by Public Law 91-604, 84 STAT. 1676.

The purpose of this hearing is to receive further updated information as to whether there will continue to be an insufficiency of conforming No. 6 Fuel Oil: the air quality impact resulting from the use of this nonconforming fuel: and energy conservation measures which may be implemented by the applicant and its customers.

Interested parties are invited to attend and to present testimony or other evidence pertaining to the fuel situation in the area affected by this application. Written comments concerning this matter may be submitted by communication addressed to Chairman Swidler or Commissioner Biggane, with a copy to the other, and delivered before August 6, 1974.

Fired With .357 Magnum Revolvers

Debate Over Police Use of 'Dum Dum' Bullets

By United Press International

A growing number of U.S. police departments are using hollow-nosed bullets similar to the infamous "Dum Dum" outlawed in warfare for the last 75 years as an inhumane weapon.

The bullet is used in the powerful Magnum .357 revolvers, being increasingly adopted by American policemen in place of the standard .38 Police Special.

Police departments in at least 14 states have switched to the Magnum or allow officers an option to use it.

The New York State Police recently announced that all of its troopers will soon be issued the weapon.

The hollow-nosed bullet, which flattens and expands after penetrating its target and leaves a gaping wound, is often used by hunters for big game.

It was first made at the Dum Dum arsenal in India for British troops to use against rioting frontier tribes in the 1800s.

It was banned at the second Hague conference in 1899 and subsequently forbidden by the U.S. military as "inhumane and cruel", according to Jordon J. Paust, a University of Houston law professor and a former military lawyer.

The modern "hollow-point", Paust said, "is similar to the Dum Dum in that it tumbles through the air, flattens out on impact and rips and tears at angles through the body."

Paust has urged Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to sponsor federal legislation banning hollow-points.

The biggest manufacturer of hollow-points is the Jurras Ammunition Co., of Indianapolis. A Jurras official said 10 per cent of its sales are to police departments and 90 per cent of that is for hollow-points or similar ammunition.

Jurras supplies police departments in Chicago, New York, Seattle, Portland, Ore., Houston, Sacramento, Calif., Phoenix, Ariz., and state police departments in Arizona, Texas, and Ohio.

The Los Angeles Police Department recently dropped the Magnum because it was regarded as too powerful. Troopers in New York and New Jersey use Magnums but not hollow-point bullets.

The use of hollow points and Magnums has touched off a heated debate in Connecticut, which recently started equipping state troopers with them with orders to fire no warning shots, but only shoot to kill.

The Hartford City Council passed a unanimous resolution opposing the change. The executive council of the Episcopal Diocese of Connecticut issued a rare public statement condemning the new weapons as "inhuman . . . excessive use of force and . . . totally at odds with any sense of rehabilitation."

The Westport, Conn., Fairpress called for State Police Commissioner Cleveland Fuessenich to resign unless he produces statistics and financial evidence to justify the department's use of the Magnum.

But many police officials and ballistics experts defend hollow-points and Magnums.

Donald R. Dunn, general manager of H. P. White Laboratory in Bel Air, Md., which has tested hollow points, says a policeman in an emergency situation "wants to be sure that when he wants someone to stop, whatever he uses, he wants them to stop.

"If that means death then so be it."

The public is being swayed on an emotional basis, Dunn said.

"They fail to see the law enforcement officer killed in the line of duty because of the inadequacy of their protective devices," he said.

"Those who would rather use lollipops on gunmen will have to go elsewhere," Gov. Thomas J. Meskill said.

Lowenstein Out: Money, 'Balance' Main Complaints

NEW YORK (UPI) — Allard Lowenstein has pulled out of the race for the Democratic Senate nomination.

He cited a lack of funds and the "obsession" of some Democrats with ethnic ticket-balancing.

"My reasons for withdrawing from the primary are complicated and mixed," Lowenstein said at a news briefing. "First, there is the inordinate cost of campaigning without public financing and against well financed competition.

"Secondly, it became clear to me that I couldn't unite the party in the Senate race because of the question of the ethnic affiliation of the candidates."

"It is valid for ethnic groups to want to be represented in government, but to make 'a' factor 'the' factor is an obsession and becomes invalid," Lowenstein, who is Jewish, said.

He said he will not endorse any candidate in the Senate primary because "I was the candidate with the most broad-based support and I haven't gotten over the feeling that I am the best candidate."

Lowenstein, who received 40 per cent of the Democratic State Committee votes at the Niagara Falls nominating convention and the support of the New Democratic Coalition and Americans for Democratic Action, would have faced Syracuse Mayor Lee Alexander, the party designee, in the primary.

Crawford, Resseguie Interviewed

Ulster GOP Still Mum on 27th

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON — The two leading contenders for the Republican nomination for congressman in the 27th District, failed to receive the endorsement Monday night of the GOP chairman of the 13 towns that comprise the district.

Both Broome County Executive Edwin Crawford, a moderate-liberal and Binghamton lawyer Franklin B. Resseguie, a moderate-conservative Republican, were on the scene earlier in the day and appeared before the chairmen at a meeting in GOP headquarters at the Gov. Clinton Hotel.

Subjects such as amnesty and abortion were discussed and both candidates were quizzed by the chairmen with regard to their political philosophies on many issues.

County GOP Chairman Albert Spada said the chairmen wished to have more time to acquaint themselves with the candidates and their views before making commitment, if, indeed they ever do before Primary Day, Sept. 10.

Both candidates, who are but two out of a field of five, promised to keep in touch with Ulster County Republicans and the news media to make their views better known to Uster County residents.

Resseguie and Crawford also face Carl Saddlemire, six-term county treasurer of Tioga County; Binghamton Mayor Alfred J. Libous and Richard H. Knauf, a former 12-year member of the State Asembly. None of the latter three candidates has made any concerted effort to win the Ulster County GOP endorsement. Both Resseguie and Crawford have been campaigning here on a number of occasions. Resseguie said he met with at least 10 out of the 13 town chairmen previously.

Both Crawford and Resseguie seek the seat now occupied by Rep. Howard W. Robison who is not seeking another term. Robison represents parts of Chemung, Tompkins, Delaware, Tioga and Ulster counties as well as Broome and Sullivan counties. Ulster towns in the district include Hardenbergh, Shandaken, Denning, Wawarsing, Rochester, Olive, Woodstock, Gardiner, New Paltz, Rosendale, Marlbetown, Hurley and Town of Kingston.

Crawford already has the endorsement of Sullivan and Delaware counties. Resseguie has conservative endorsement in Ulster, Broome and Sullivan counties.

Resseguie said he entered the race because he felt that a moderate-conservative approach to federal government would be "more representative of the aspirations of the people of the district and I felt that I was representative of those aspirations."

Crawford suggests that his approach to national issues is along the same lines as Robison although he declares himself a fiscal conservative as well.

Regarding amnesty, Crawford would like to see conditional amnesty, he said, before a review board which would make an agreement to allow the person in question to either go into the military for two years or an alternative service to government. He said this would no apply to deserters or those who wilfully fled the country to avoid registration or induction.

Resseguie takes a more stringent conservative stand on amnesty but, according to Spada agrees that there should be a review board.

Regarding abortion, Resseguie would like to be identified as supporting the Buckley amendment while Crawford would abide by any Supreme Court decision.

Crawford has been under attack in recent days for solication of campaign funds from Broome County office holders involved in the spending of thousands of dollars of county funds. Crawford told the Freeman that all moneys in question (about $900) have been returned and that although county employes did the soliciting, he would assume the blame and that he has directed that no county employe solicit funds on behalf of any candidate.

Fish Files Income Report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr., has set his net worth at $114,430., according to a financial disclosure statement he made this week that shows he paid $12,194.01 in federal state and local taxes in 1973.

During 1969 through 1972, he paid a total federal, state and local tax of $66,445.17.

The 25th District Republican who is seeking a third two-year term, did not state how much money he earned in 1973 but it includes his congressional salary of $42,500 plus dividends, interest, honorariums, trustee commissions, capital gains and income from interest in rental property.

Fish claims that as of June 20, 1974, he owns no stocks or bonds.

His non secured indebtedness amounts to $20,000 borrowed from his sister, Elizabeth S. Pyne.

Fish reports no sources of reimbursements for expenditures over ($100) (other than government and other than reported as campaign contribution.)

Of the $12,194.01 paid in 1973 income taxes, Fish gave $5,522.95 to the federal government, $2,630.80 to the state and $4,040.26 in local taxes.

In remarks prepared for the House of Representatives, the congressman said, "my statement goes far beyond the disclosure mandated by the House rules because I believe the public desires and deserves assurances that individuals privileged to serve in elective office are not subject to any potential or actual conflicts of interest."

Fish, an advocate of financial dislcosure for public officials and lobbyists, requested his statement, including sources of income, taxes paid, and amounts of indebtedness, be printed in the Congressional Record.

Ellenville Moves Main Street Traffic

By WADE BURKHART

ELLENVILLE — The Ellenvile Village Board, after a public hearing Monday night, eliminated parking along three blocks of Main Street in the village in an effort to break the traffic jam that has become almost a way of life in Ellenville during the summer months.

As part of a plan recommended by Chief of Police William C. Trapnell, there will be no parking along Main Street from Liberty Street to Warren.

In addition, the board banned southbound left turns from Main onto Maple Avenue and Liberty and Canal Streets. Trapnell said that by having left turns only onto Center Street from Main, his men could better control the traffic and keep it moving.

The traffic men Trapnell spoke of are two special policemen the board also voted to hire Monday night. They will be stationed at the lights on Main at Canal and Center Streets.

All the traffic action was not the end of the Trapnell plan. The chief's plan also includes the return of one-way streets in Ellenville, with Canal one way west, and Center east, though not until after the summer crush is over, perhaps in early fall.

Main Street in Ellenville has been a bad bottleneck for years, and when summer tourist traffic augments the local variety it sometimes resembles a parking lot more than a road.

Undismayed by that, Trapnell declared, "I can move traffic through Ellenville," before outlining his plan.

The no parking along Main Street will allow three traffic lanes from Liberty to Canal, four lanes from Canal to Center, and three again from Center to Warren. The extra lanes between Center and Canal are going to be used for "stacking" lanes, according to Trapnell's explanation, so that left turns will not impede the traffic flow.

The only exception to the left turn ban will be school buses, which will be permitted to turn left onto Maple Avenue.

The measures the board adopted Monday will go into effect as soon as they can be published, according to Village Attonrey Alex Nirenberg.

In other action, Mayor Robert Dowling bowed to the will of the people, and reversed his stance on a public telephone stand after consulting the audience.

Martin Lippman of the Coachman Diner and Restaurant wrote to the board protesting a new telephone stand at the McDonald's next to the Coachman, complaining that it was a traffic hazard and saying he had five public phones in his restaurant available 24 hours a day.

In an informal polling of the board, the trustees deadlocked 2-2 on the question, and Dowling said he was in favor of removing the telephone. After taking a vote of the audience — "Just to see how wrong I can be," said Dowling — he reversed his stand after finding the audience overhwlemingly for the phone. That made the formal vote 3-2 for the phone, and it will stay where it is.

After Trustee Bernard Wainer spoke against what he saw as a lack of "neatness" by the contractor doing work in the village for the New York Telephone Company, the board directed Building Inspector Howard Weiss to shut the job down. Weiss said, during the discussion, that the contractor had no village permit for the work he was doing.

Incumbents Back On Board

KYSERIKE — Reappointment of incumbents was the order of business Monday night at the reorganizational meeting of the Rondout Valley Board of Education.

New board members Charles Ludlow and Richard Villamil were sworn in to replace Morris Felsen and Carl Grassi and the board then elected Wayne Kelder and Julian Bartle to another year as board president and vice president respectively.

Others named again included John Basten, board clerk; Lee Comeau, treasurer; Virginia Cairo, internal auditor; Thomas Plunkett, attorney; and Margaret Lester, purchasing agent. Mrs. Joan Every, who shared the tax collector's job with Mrs. Helen Osterhoudt last year, will hold the position by herself this year.

The cooperative fuel oil bid was awarded to Austin R. Newcombe of Kingston, the Kingston Trust Company was named official depository, and the Rondout Valley Times and The Daily Freeman were named official newspapers.

The board will continue meeting on the third Tuesday of the month at 8 p.m. in the high school library. Board meetings for July and August, as usual, were canceled. Committee appointments for board members will be announced later, Kelder said.

Doctor Doesn't Care... But Boyfriend's Kept Away

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the most horrifying article in the Wall Street Journal headlined: "Painful Puzzle Viral V.D. Is Contagious and Doesn't Go Away." Then it described the horrors of Herpes 2, a genital-area virus which manifests itself in painful lesions, akin to facial "cold sores."

The article stated that Herpes 2 is approaching gonorrhea as the next most prevalent veneral disease, is highly contagious, can be contracted by males, results in infant mortality and cervical cancer and, once contracted, can never be cured and will recur sporadically!

Abby, I am a woman who has suffered from Herpes 2 since 1967, and never once has my physician evinced the least concern over it. He prescribed only symptomatic relief remedies and vitamin C, and said, "Let it run its course."

Since my boyfriend saw the article, he's been treating me like I have leprosy.

Please consult with your experts and let us thousands of Herpes sufferers know if the medical world concurs with the article's evaluation.

SIGN ME,
HERPES HANNAH

DEAR HANNAH: While the article is understandably alarming, it does not necessarily follow that all the facts concerning Herpes 2 apply to you. If your doctor is not investigating the new developments in the study of Herpes 2, find one who is, and make an appointment for two examinations (one for you and one for your boyfriend). And don't hesitate to ask the doctor any and all questions concerning this disease.

DEAR ABBY: A wife wrote to say she had found a pair of nylon panties in her husband's pickup truck, and you jumped to the conclusion that some gal friend had left them there.

You overlooked something, Abby. Those panties could have been her husband's!

There are lots of men who like the feel of smooth, soft undies next to their bodies. And don't get the idea that they aren't all men because they are. I know. I've been on the police force for 16 years, and before that I was with the U.S. Marines, and I'm one of those men. I'm also a husband and a father of six.

So, Dear Abby, did you ever consider the possibility that there was no lady in the picture?

WEAR PANTIES
(WHEN I GET THE CHANCE)

DEAR WEARS: No, I didn't. But you wouldn't believe the number of your "brothers" who wrote to suggest it.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

...it tells you how

Lynne and Jim Spaulding–a couple of young back-to-the-landers–say, "A nice lady gave us a recipe for dandelion wine that's supposed to have health-giving properties. We made it and it's great!" . . . and here's the Spauldings' formula for one gallon.

Early in the morning when the dew is on the flowers, pick one gallon of perfect, open dandelion blossoms.

Put the blooms in a two-gallon or larger open crock and pour boiling water over them. Cover the crock with cheesecloth and let it sit at room temperature for three days. Then squeeze all the juice out of the flowers, throw them away and save the liquid.

Pour the fluid into a big pot and add three pounds of brown sugar, three or four lemons (juice, skin, seeds and all, chopped up together) and three or four oranges (chopped up just like the lemons).

Put a top on the pot and boil the mixture for 30 minutes, cool it to lukewarm, pour the fluid into the crock and add one and a half or two packages or tablespoons of yeast.

Cover the brew with cheesecloth and let it "work" for two or three weeks until the bubbling stops. Filter through fresh cheesecloth and then bottle. Save your "bottled sunshine" and uncap it on a gray, overcast January day. Presto! It's summer again!

NFL Strike... Real Action Hasn't Started

NEW YORK (UPI) — You'll have the take the National Football League players word for it that they're actually on strike.

No picket lines were thrown up anywhere Monday but the NFL Players Association still insisted they are officially on strike.

There had been speculation the NFLPA might throw up picket lines around the offices of NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle on Park Ave. in New York.

But the Association decided to content itself on the first day of the strike by filing an unfair labor practice suit against the owners.

John Thompson, the director of the NFL Management Council termed the suit "nonsense."

So, there was nothing new in the stalemated negotiations between the owners and the players as they simply repeated the old charges and counter charges.

Ed Garvey, directly of the NFLPA, spoke before a group of Cincinnati Bengals veterans in Cincinnati Wednesday night and said after the three-hour meeting that the strike had the unanimous approval of the players.

But the real action doesn't start until Wednesday when the NFLPA throws up its first picket liane in San Diego where the Chargers become the first NFL team to open their training camp for rookies.

The rookies aren't eligible to join the association yet but the players are going to try to "persuade" them to honor their picket line. Although the owners haven't announced it yet, it's assumed they'll try to play the exhibition season with rookies and free agents.

The exhibition season is a lucrative one for the owners because they charge regular season prices in many cases but only pay the players a token amount. The players 'pay doesn't start until the regular season begins.

It's expected that almost all veterans will honor the picket lines—at least at the start—but most rookies are figured to join the camps.

The squeeze will come on the second string players who will be worried that they'll be in danger of losing their jobs to these rookies.

The fans, meanwhile, seem to be apathetic about the whole thing. Since the regular season is still 10 weeks away, most fans surveyed by UPI around the country greeted the strike with a yawn.

An Oakland accountant said, "I don't think anyone's really concerned yet. The pre-season games are too far away to get worried about them."

An Atlanta gas station attendant said, "it will be over before the season starts. Those things always are."

Many fans find it difficult to feel empathy with either the players or the owners.

Mike Downs, a Fort Wayne, Ind. college professor, said, "this is simply a power struggle between the two sides for a bigger slice of the pro football pie. Naturally, the owners want the status quo and naturally the players want more than they've got now.

"I really don't care which side wins. I'm just curious whether the players can hold together long enough to force concessions by the owners or whether the owners will outlast them."

But some fans are chosing sides.

Tony McGettigan, a New York City bartender, said, "if I'm paying a man $100,000 a year, I gotta right to think he'll do what I tell him to do. Who are these guys to be complaining about things like curfews. The players are crazy."

A doctor in suburban New Jersey said he supported the players' aims and said he didn't think the strike would hurt their image. "The public forgot about the Vietnam War and they'll forget about this strike after it's over," he said.

The NFLPA filed its suit in Minneapolis, the site of the group's labor law firm, after the owners sent letters to the rookies warning them that their bonuses could be revoked if they didn't report.

Garvey said the letter smacked of "union busting, pure and simple."

Thompson said, "the substance of the union charge is nonsense. The union's definition of meaningful bargaining is total acceptance of its demands. The union says we are trying to 'bust' it. The quickest way to do that would be the union way—to break up the league."

Meanwhile, no new meetings have been scheduled between the sides.

THE ISSUES

New York (UPI)—Major issues in the strike by the National Football League Players Association.

"Freedom"—are demanding elimination of all restrictions on player movement between teams, including the waiver system, reserve list and option clause of their contract. A chief target is the "Rozelle Rule" which conpensates a team when a player plays out his option and moves to another club. The players say the Rozelle Rule effectively inhibits movement.

Discipline—The players are demanding an end to curfews and disciplinary actions, the elimination of fines, and a limit on practice hours in training camp.

Rozelle—The players want Commissioner Pete Rozelle's power severely curbed, particularly his right to levy fines for things like fights on the field or, for example, the San Diego Chargers drug case, the players also want an end to Rozelle's power to suspend players (Paul Horning, Lance Rentzel for example).

Money—The owners say the players' demands in this area would add $130,000,000 a year to the teams' payrolls, not counting individual salary bargaining or insurance and pension increases. Players are seeking increases in minimum salary, now $12,000 for rookies and $13,000 for veterans, to $20,000 and $25,000, respectively, hikes in exhibition game salaries from a top of $2,160 for six games now to a top of $12,000; an increase in training camp per-diem from $14.15 to $30; and increases in playoffs and super bowl bonuses, in insurance coverage and pensions. The present pension pays a five-year veteran $525 a month at age 55.

Rules—The players are protesting two rules changes this year—sudden death overtime and the punt coverage rule which allows only two outside receivers to go down field until the ball is kicked. They say these rules will lead to more injuries and want the rules changes negotiated.

But there really isn't a sense of urgency in this strike. The College All-Star game isn't schedule until Friday, July 26 and both sides know the Miami Dolphins could get ready for it if the strike is settled by Monday, July 22.

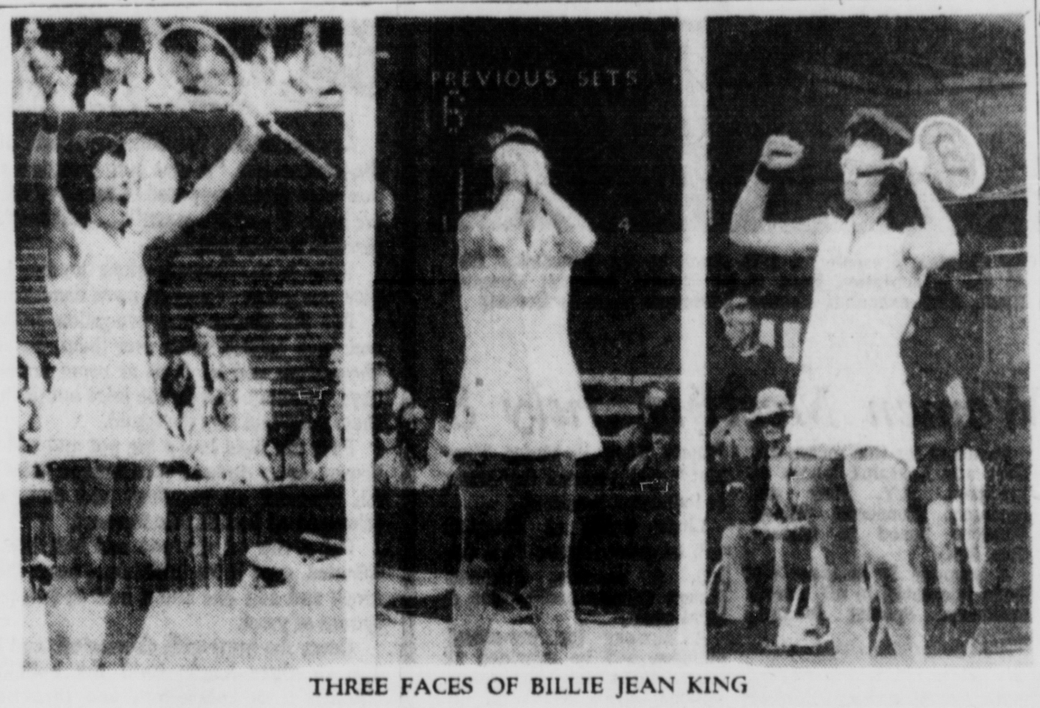

The strike doesn't really start costing the owners money until the weekend of August 3rd when the first full slate of exhibition games is scheduled.

When the players struck four years ago, they gave Kansas City an exemption to play the College All-Star game and a settlement was reached before any exhibition games were cancelled.

But this strike is going to be much more difficult to end.

EL SHAFEI (L) AND BORG EXCHANGE GREETINGS

THREE FACES OF BILLIE JEAN KING

Casals Upset; Billie Jean, Chris, Evonne Win

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Linky Boshoff, a little known South African, forced a string of errors from fourth seeded Rosie Casals today to beat her 6-2, 6-3, and enter the women's singles quarterfinals at the All England tennis championships.

Miss Casals, of San Francisco, was the first seed to fall in the women's division and she could not blame rain, wind and a slow court for her exit. The 17-year-old South African won on merit.

While Casals was falling, the top three girls all advanced in straight sets. Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., defeated Lesley Charles of Britain, 6-3, 6-0; Chris Evert of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., beat Mona Schallau of Iowa City, Iowa, 7-5, 6-1, and third seeded Evonne Goolagong of Australia defeated Kris Kemmer of Los Angeles, 6-1, 6-4.

When the day's play began, the United States, with 13 players, led the most international field in the history of the Wimbledon championships into the matches for places in the quarterfinals.

There are 14 nations represented in the last 32—and the Australians with five and Britain with two are the only others with more than one representative. The remaining countries, widely scattered over the globe, dramatize the spread of big time tennis.

It would be nice to credit love of sport for the upsurge but the missionaries in the days of amateur tennis only had moderate success with the gospel of free travel and expenses. What has every kid with access to a racket out practicing is the most potent lure of them all—money.

Winner's Share

The 10 remaining seeds in the men's singles, headed by top seed Jon Newcombe, are all inspired by the $24,000 first prize. And the attraction for the seven women's seeds, led by defending champion Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., is the $16,800 winner's share of the $234,480 in awards.

The field today is without its fifth seed, the 18-year-old schoolgirl favorite, Bjor Borg of Sweden, who went down in straight sets Monday to Ismael El Shafei of Egypt, hardly lifting a racket in anger. Borg, who has complained of fatigue since winning the French and Italian titles said:

"I'm not disappointed. I'm happy that I can now go home for a rest."

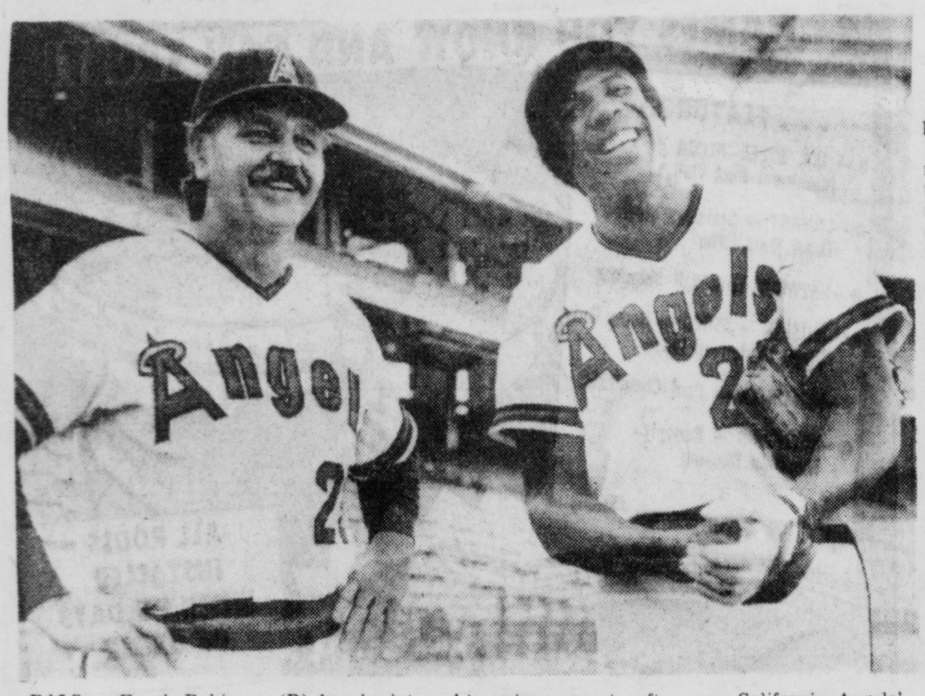

Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., got to the last 16 by beating Arthur Ashe of Miami, the eighth seed in a match played, as most others were Monday, in quirky gusts of wind. Tanner said the wind seemed to bother Ashe more than it did him.

Playing On Grass

"I lost in the first round in the French championships and with it a lot of my confidence," Tanner said. "But I got it back at Nottingham, a week before Wimbledon, playing on grass."

Mrs. King, who is aiming for all three titles—singles, doubles and mixed—said the center court wind kept her from using a drop shot Monday. She had a little trouble with her forehand early in her straight sets win over Francoise Durr of France and shouted "I don't believe it" when one after the other went into the net.

With 14 matches to play in the next five days, if she is to grab all the titles, Billie Jean said she was in good shape, "the thinnest I've ever been. I'm physically and mentally ready. It's just a question of keeping concentration."

PALS — Frank Robinson (R) breaks into a big grin moments after new California Angels' Manager Dick Williams announced that Robinson had been named team captain. Williams made his debut as Califronia manager Monday night but lost a 5-3 decision to Oakland. (UPI)

A's Spoil Dick's Return

By United Press International

Dick Williams' return to managing was proceeding in a triumphant fashion Monday night until the Oakland A's decided to throw a victory party of their own.

Then, a crowd of 16,405 which turned out at Anaheim, Calif., to see Williams make his debut as manager of the California Angels watched in dismay as the A's rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to score a 5-3 victory.

Until then the night had belonged to Williams . . . first, with his surprise appointment of Frank Robinson as the Angels' first captain.. then with the standing ovation...followed by an argument with the umpires . . . and then as Nolan Ryan carried a 3-2 lead into the eighth.

It looked like Williams was working instant magic with the Angels, who had lost 20 of their previous 28 games and are in last place in the American League's Western Division.

But Bert Campaneris began the comeback against the A's former boss, who led them to world championships in 1972 and 1973, with a single, took second on a passed ball and scored on Sal Bando's double. Bando took third on a wild pitch during an intentional walk to Reggie Jackson, and scored on Joe Rudi's sacrifice fly. Angel Mangual's double scored the third run of the frame.

Rollie Fingers, called on in relief in 12 of 14 World Series games played by the A's under Williams, picked up his seventh victory while Ryan suffered his seventh loss against 10 wins.

It was almost as if the A's — those cantankerous critters — were telling Williams he couldn't have won those two world titles without them.

The Cleveland Indians defeated the Milwaukee Brewers, 3-1 and 9-3, the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles, 6-4, the Kansas City Royals downed the Chicago White Sox, 9-0, the Detroit Tigers shaded the New York Yankees, 4-3, and the Texas Rangers topped the Minnesota Twins, 6-2, in other American League games.

The Houston Astros blanked the Atlanta Braves, 3-0, and the Montreal Expos routed the Chicago Cubs, 10-4, in the only National League games.

Indians 3-9 Brewers 1-3

George Hendrick and John Ellis each drove in five runs during the Indians' sweep of the Brewers, Hendrick raising his average for the last 18 games to .438. Hendrick's two-run homer capped a three-run sixth inning which brought reliever Fred Beene his second win in the first game and his three-run homer climaxed a four-run seventh in the second game. Ellis drove in all his five runs in the nightcap, three with a homer in the third inning.

Red Sox 6 Orioles 4

Cecil Cooper's two-run homer in the first inning sent the Red Sox off in front and Bill Lee went 6 1-3 innings for his ninth victory for the Red Sox. Doyle Alexander suffered the loss for the Orioles despite a homer by Earle Williams.

Royals 9 White Sox 0

Bruce Dal Canton pitched a five-hitter and Cookie Rojas went 4-for-5 with four runs batted in to lead the Royals to their victory over the White Sox. Rojas, Fred Patek and Hal McRae homered for the Royals, who dealt Stan Bahnsen his ninth defeat against seven wins.

Rangers 6 Twins 2

Jackie Brown won his seventh game for the Rangers behind a nine-hit attack which included homers by Jim Sundberg and Toby Harrah. The Rangers clinched the game with a four-run ninth inning which gave them a 6-1 lead with Steve Foucault finishing up for Brown. Joe Decker was the loser.

Fireman Just Keeps Rolling Along

DETROIT (AP) — Fireworks, a fire and a fireman all had their hour Monday night at Tiger Stadium.

The fireworks are over, the fire is out, but the fireman just keeps rolling along.

Ron Blomberg, Ben Oglivie, Gates Brown and Jim Northrup provided the fireworks with home runs.

But it was Northrup's blast in the eighth inning that snapped a 3-3 deadlock and gave fireman John Hiller his 10th victory of the season as the Detroit Tigers edged the New York Yankees 4-3.

No relief pitcher in baseball has ever won 20 games, but with the season half over, Hiller is half way there. The National League mark for victories by a reliever is 18 by Elroy Face. Hiller is within seven of passing Dick Radatz for the American League record.

"Sure, anything is possible," the soft-spoken southpaw said of a 20-triumph season. "But you've got to get in the right situations and sometimes they just don't happen."

Hiller, taking over for luckless Joe Coleman in the eighth, slammed the door on the Yankees the last two innings to up his record to 10-5. It was his 31st appearance this year.

Doc Medich, meanwhile, couldn't seem to close the door at all and his record fell to 8-7. The New York starter gave up three homers to run his season gopher ball total to 17 as he doomed the Yankees to their fifth consecutive loss.

The teams meet again tonight, with southpaw Luke Walker, 3-0, scheduled to pitch for Detroit against righthander Pat Dobson, 6-9.

The Tigers are fourth in the AL East, 3½ games behind leader Boston, while New York is last, 7½ games off the pace.

During batting practice Monday, a fire flared in the stadium's press box elevator, engulfing a long hallway and nearly reaching the press box. It was put out by Detroit firemen.

Cecil Upshaw relieved Medich in the eighth but not in time to put out the fire for the Yankees.

The Tigers trailed 3-1 due to a run-scoring single by Ron Blomberg in the first inning and his two-run homer in the sixth.

Detroit, which got a run in the fifth on an RBI single by Al Kaline, narrowed the gap on a towering homer by Oglivie in the sixth which just missed going over the third deck roof in rightfield.

Gates Brown tied the score 3-3 with a pinch hit homer the next inning. It was his 91st career pinch hit and 13th pinch homer.

In the eighth, after Oglivie lined deep to Lou Piniella in left, Northrup got back the fans' attention by cracking his fifth homer just out of Piniella's reach.

"It hit the top of the fence," Piniella said. "If I'd have gotten back to the wall I would have caught it. I was under it twice and then all of a sudden . . I caught Oglivie's ball easy and it was hit harder. Northrup's ball seemed like just a routine fly."

The spectators in the centerfield bleachers, however, couldn't seem to decide whether to watch the game or the real fireworks extravaganza on the nearby Detroit River, which drew tens of thousands of spectators.

Braves' Hurlers Fire Blanks

KINGSTON — The pitching staff of the Kingston Braves has a streak on the line tonight when the locals take on the New Paltz Falcons in a Hudson Valley Rookie League doubleheader at Dietz Stadium — 20 scoreless innings.

Since the division leading Poughkeepsie Lasers scored two runs in the first inning of the Braves' first game, Tom Gallo, Charlie Moore and Bob Marz have been untouchable. Gallo lost the opener, 2-1, Moore got the Braves' record even with a 9-0 whitewash of Monroe-Woodbury, and Marz topped it all with a no-hitter over the weekend at Carmel.

That puts the Braves in a second place tie with the Falcons in the league's Northern Division. Poughkeepsie, the defending champs, lead by a game-and-a-half with a 6-2 slate.

The Lasers got their latest victory Sunday when Mark Softy's three-hitter defeated winless Marlboro, 6-0. The Newburgh Atoms meanwhile stayed unbeaten and atop the Southern Division with a 1-0 squeaker over Monroe-Woodbury in a game marred by a protest and an 8-2 win in the second half of a dobuleheader.

Kingston's 13-0 walloping of Carmel fueled a three-game losing streak for the Mets. On Saturday Carmel dropped a 4-2 game to Minisink Valley, and on Sunday night the Mets took a 7-0 drubbing from Wappingers.

Next on tap for the Braves will be a second round battle against Marlboro slated for July 9. On Sunday, July 7, the North-South All Star game will be played at Recreation Field in Newburgh.

Cup Teams Review Strategy

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Television tape and the trainer's table took over today as key elements in soccer's 1974 World Cup.

The videotape will help Holland's manager, Rinus Michels, plot his strategy for Wednesday's decisive match against Brazil.

The trainer will be in action in the Polish camp at Murrhardt, working on two top players in the hope they will be physically fit for the equally decisive match against West Germany.

Brazil and Poland must win to get to the World Cup final at Munich Sunday. Ties would be enough to put Holland and West Germany through.

Michels, who has commuted between Germany and Spain to help out his club, Barcelona, in the Spanish Cup, has not had a first-hand view of the Brazilian team in action.

He has, however, a complete dossier on the Brazilians, compiled by Cor Van Der Hart, one of the backroom brains of the Dutch camp. He also has had full videotapes prepared on every Brazilian match in this series which he plans to study before naming a team Wednesday.

Michels says his players are finding World Cup football more tiring mentally than physically.

"It's the tension and stress that build up as one gets closer to the final," he said. "For instance, we have a fine hotel here at Hiltrup. We have our own cook, excellent food. But all my players look leaner than usual. That's what stress does."

Poland's injury worries center on captain Kjtimirez Deyna and striker Andrzej Szarmach, the tournament's No. 2 scorer with five goals in five matches. Deyna has a pulled calf muscle and Szarmach has a badly bruised right thigh.

Dr. Janusz Garlicki, team physician, said he hoped both men would be fit for the match against West Germany in Frankfurt.

Brazil's only injury worry is a possible bruised rib suffered by Francisco Marinho, the blond midfielder who has been the discovery of the series. He was expected to be fit to play.

Other matches bring Argentina against East Germany and Sweden against Yugoslavia. Although none can reach the final four, Argentina decided to play despite the death of President Juan Peron.

Moses' Ma Upset by ThoseCars

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Basketball superstar Moses Malone's mother has told a Richmond newspaper that two colleges offered money and an automobile to her son in apparent violation of NCAA recruiting rules.

Mrs. Mary Malone said Clemson offered her son $1,000 through an intermediary to buy a car and a New Mexico recruiter loaned him a rental car, the Times Dispatch reported in today's editions.

Malone, the most heavily recruited high school player in years while at Petersburg High School, signed recently with the University of Maryland. He's now working at a summer job in Washington, Mrs. Malone said.

"Clemson offered Mo money," she said. "They gave my brother a grand to buy a car for Mo."

The car deal apparently fell through when Mrs. Malone's brother, Charley Hudgins, was unable to secure financing for the auto, the newspaper reported.

Mrs. Malone said she didn't know what happened to the money, but neither she nor her son took any of it, the story said.

Mrs. Malone also said John Whisenant, a New Mexico assistant coach who recruited in Petersburg for three months, allowed Malone to use his rental car for a short period, the Times-Dispatch said.

The car was given to her son through an intermediary, Mrs. Malone said, and when she discovered that he ha d the vehicle, "I told Mo he had to give it back.

"Then I called coach Whisenant and told him to come over here and get his car. I was pretty mad, and I also told him to get out of town, but I guess I had no right to do that," the Times-Dispatch said.

Whisenant, Hudgins and Clemson Coach Tates Locke couldn't be reached for comment Monday night.

Mrs. Malone said she and her son informed NCAA investigators of the alleged violations and knew of no other schools which had broken regulations in an effort to recruit Malone, the newspaper reported.

Mrs. Malone said she's very glad the recruiting war for her son is over, but she was "kind of glad I went through it. It was educating. What I learned from it is how crooked some people can be and how nice some people can be."

Bouton: Grand Slam

KINGSTON — Clayton Bouton's dramatic sixth inning grand slam powered the Jays past the Hawks, 9-6, at Forsythe Park in the Jaycee Litte League.

The blow spoiled a victory bid by the Hawks' Bob O'Connell who entered the final frame with a two-run lead. The Jays scored one run then loaded the sacks to set up Bouton's winning homer. It was the second gopher O'Connell served up as earlier Vince DeCicco cracked a circuit for the winners.

Bruce Winchell picked up the decision in relief of Mike Reilly. Reilly aided the attack with two hits while leadoff man Anthony Nash stroked three safeties. O'Connell paced the Hawks with three hits at the plate, and Craig Cane belted a double in defeat.

In the Kingston American Loop, Terry Folwell pitched the second consecutive complete game shutout of the week for the Smedes mound staff as the Plumbers cruised to a 6-0 win over Rondout National Bank.

Folwell, backed by excellent defensiive support, spaced four hits and fanned seven Bankers over the distance. Tony Tiano took the loss. Andy Connors of Smedes and Paul Loughlin of RNB traded two-baggers.

Misses Finish Line

LOUISVILLE (AP) — In the 1957 Kentucky Derby, Bill Hartack won the Kentucky Derby with Iron Leige when jockey Bill Shoemaker, riding Gallant Man, misjudged the finish line. Shoemaker stopped riding short of the finish line.

The same thing happened to Hartack at Churchill Downs this spring in the National Turfwriters' Purse. He stood up in the irons at the 16th pole. He was riding Fun Co. K. The mistake enable No No Billy to win the race by a head.

KINGSTON — Silvia Armstrong and Mary Beckwith slammed three-run homers in the top of the seventh during an 11-run explosion, as the Yankees trounced the Uutouchables 11-4 in the first extra inning in the American Little League's girls softball loop.

The teams were tied 3-3 in regulation distance. The starting pitchers, Silvia Armstrong and Margaret Keizer, had to leave the game after six innings because of league rules. Peggy Petro came on to preserve Miss Armstrong's 2-hit victory in seven games, but the Yankee sluggers overpowered Chanda Girard, the Untouchables' relief pitcher.

In addition to the Armstrong-Beckwith homers, Sue Schneider hit a double and triple, Maryanne McCloskey had three singles and Mary Beckwith a pair of singles to go with her homer.

Pat Miller pitched a four-hitter and shutout ball after the first inning to give Daisy Maes a 10-3 romp over the Mets. It was Pat's fifth win against two losses.

Canfield's Now 6-0

KINGSTON — Duke Rass, backed by a potent offense, fired a five-hitter in the Swing Division of the City Slo Pitch League to keep Canfield's undefeated in six games with a 10-1 triumph over the Children's Home.

In other games, Stephens Foxhall Corp. lingered a half game off the pace with a 14-5 victory over Orange County Plumbing, and Elmendorf Brothers defeated Jeff's Place, 9-3 in a struggle of 2-2 teams.

The Becker boys staked Rass to a quick two-run lead in the first and ran it up in the next three frames. Fred Becker tripled, poked two singles and drove in three runs, and Jack Becker helped out with a double and a triple. Jim Malano added three hits for the winners.

Rass held the Children's Home scoreless until a lone run in the last of the seventh spoiled the shutout.

George Lay scattered seven hits, slugged a home run and drove in two runs to power Stephens Foxhall to its fifth win in six games. The Plumbers hung in the contest most of the way and held a 4-2 lead after three innings, but a nine-run burst in the home sixth broke it open.

Cliff Lyons and Phil Nero had three hits each for the winners while Jeff Lisman and Vic Nyulassy tagged triples.

Dennis Elmendorf crashed a pair of homers, and teammates Bruce Jones and Charlie Howell each bombed one to help send Jeff's Place down to defeat. Wayne Elmendorf was the winning pitcher with a seven-hitter.

Real Estate—SALE Houses for Sale 103

Don't let inflation force your family into a ticky-tack house.

In the 27 years we've been in business, we've proved to thousands of people that we can give them a larger, better home for their money. You too can have a home worth thousands of dollars more than you pay for it if you're willing to do some of the finishing work yourselves—or supervise it.

We'll mortgage it for you. Because we believe in our homes and in the people who buy them, we put up the money.

No big down payment. Banks want up to 30% down. That can be discouraging. We ask for just a fraction of that.

Custom-designed. You've got your own ideas about what's important in a home. Take any one of our 78 basic models and modify the plans to suit yourselves.

It's your investment. A home is more than a place to live, it's probably the biggest investment you'll ever make. Make it a wise one.

Wednesday, July 3

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) The competition is going to be stiffer than you counted on when it comes to satisfying your personal ambitions over the next few days.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't try to impose your philosophy or ideas on subordinates. There's no market for what you're selling.

(GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do the best you can to keep current on obligations that are now due. At least acknowledge them with token payments, if possible.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone is going to be very angry with you if you break your word to her regarding something you promised to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't put responsibilities off, thinking you'll get around to them later. You won't — they'll just pile up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) For the next few days avoid any type of risky or speculative venture. Someone else could profit, but not you.

LIBRA (Spet. 23-Oct. 23) You're subject at this time to be overly responsive to pressures from others. Think for yourself. Run your own show.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't lock yourself into a corner by sticking to outmoded plans and ideas that aren't feasible for your present needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The next few days will require prudent management in all your material dealings. If buying, selling or trading, be as sharp as possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will not be free to move about as independently as you'd like 'til after Friday, when others lessen their demands on your time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Situations over which you'll have little control will have the upper hand for a few days. Be patient. Wait things out.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be better off in the long run if you lay aside for the present your pursuit of more pleasurable interests and get down to business.

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

ANOTHER GIRL: (Q.) Well, it seems that I am pretty shy and not that popular. But at a club I go to there is a boy I like.

One week he seems to like me and then the next week he will have a girl with him.

What should I do?—Trying in Texas.

(A.) You can be friendly, smile, and, on one of the days when the other girl is not with him, ask him to call you.

The fact that a boy dates one girl once in a while does not mean that he cannot date other girls once in a while.

FOUR YEARS: (Q.) My mother forced my sister to get a job when she was 17. My sister got back at her by smoking, drinking and cursing

I'm 14. I want to date but my mother won't let me, because of what my sister has done to her. My father says I can date, but my mother says no

All my friends tell me to sneak behind her back. I won't do that. She says she is going to keep me home (not letting me date or get a job) until I am 18. What should I do?—Suffering in Florida

(A.) Keep communications open with both your mother and father. Talk to both of them, both separately and together, about what they think and what you think.

If you do, and if you will be patient and completely honest, I believe the rules will be changed before too long.

(Write to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 2402, Houseon, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Jean Adams cannot send personal answers.)

Remember the story about the man giving directions who finally said, "You can't get there from here."

South may well have had that story in mind when he played to the second trick because he made sure that he would get from dummy to his own hand when it became necessary.

He won the first trick with the ace of diamonds. After planning the whole play of the hand, he proceeded to ruff a diamond with the ace of trumps. He returned to his hand by ruffing a club and ruffed his last diamond with the king of trumps. Then he led dummy's nine of trumps. East played low. South overtook with the 10 in order to lead a second trump.

East won and led a diamond. South ruffed, drew East's last trump with his own last trump and went after hearts. When the suit broke nicely he claimed the balance.

North had overbid a trifle and South had needed good breaks, but he also needed good play. If he had ruffed a diamond with dummy's nine of trumps he would have been stuck in dummy at the wrong time and unable both to pull trumps and run hearts.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

In his "Politics," Aristotle professed: "The best political community is formed by citizens of the middle class. Those states are likely to be well-administered in which the middle class is large, and larger if possible than both the other classes ... for the addition of the middle class turns the scale and prevents either of the extremes from being dominant," The World Almanac notes.

Man Who Revealed Tapes Is First Witness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The man who last July revealed that President Nixon had been taping White House conversations was the first witness scheduled before the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry today.

And as the Supreme Court considers arguments on Nixon's right to withhold some of those tapes from prosecutors and defense attorneys, a federal jury listens to the cross-examination of a former Nixon aide who testified Monday that John D. Ehrlichman removed from White House files three documents relating to the Ellsberg break in.

Federal Aviation Administration director Alexander P. Butterfield, a former Nixon aide who told the Senate Watergate Committee last year about the taping, was expected to tell the House committee about White House staff organization.

One Democratic member said Butterfield would confirm that Nixon's former staff chief, H.R. [illegible] Nixon's authority and knowledge.

If the committee were to recommend impeachment on grounds Nixon was part of an illegal conspiracy, it would be necessary to link Haldeman's activities with Nixon's.

At the Ellsberg trial, at which Ehrlichman and three others are charged with conspiracy in the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office, David R. Young was to undergo defense questions about his testimony Monday.

Prosecution witness Young, former codirector of the White House plumbers unit, said Ehrlichman removed three memos in order to keep them from becoming public and authorized a "covert operation" at the doctor's office. Young, however, made copies of memos.

He also testified that Ehrlichman told him President Nixon knew of the effort to discredit Ellsberg, who leaked the classified Pentagon Papers, and that he considered the case one of national security.

Monday, the Supreme Court took written briefs on the question of a federal grand jury's right to name the President an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski argued that the grand jury had the right to name Nixon and that "in light of the apparent thrust of the evidence ... the naming of the President at some stage prior to (the September cover-up trial of six men) was virtually inevitable."

White House lawyers said a sitting President cannot be indicted, or even named without being indicted. Their argument was that Jaworski asked the grand jury to make such a finding so he could ask the trial court to admit a wide range of evidence against the defendants.

Nixon lawyer James D. St. Clair also argued that Jaworski's demand for more tapes and papers from the White House is "political," and that courts have no jurisdiction to review the decision of a President, who "cannot be subject to the vagaries of a grand jury nor deprived of his power to control disclosure of his most confidential communications."

The briefs supplemented documents filed June 21 in advance of arguments scheduled July 8.

In a concession to Judiciary Committee Republicans, chairman Peter W. Rodino Monday said he would call all six witnesses requested by St. Clair. They are John W. Dean III, William O. Bittman, Frederick C. LaRue, H.R. Haldeman, John N. Mitchell and Paul O'Brien.

CIA Linked to Hunt

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a three-month period immediately before the Watergate break-in, E. Howard Hunt Jr. asked his former CIA bosses to direct him to retired agents skilled in lock-picking and burglary, a report to the Senate Watergate committee said today.

The CIA official who provided the information retired one day after the arrests of the Watergate burglars, the report said.

Prepared at the direction of committee Vice Chairman Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the long-awaited report said the new information contradicts public testimony by senior CIA officials that Hunt had no contact with the agency after Aug. 21, 1971. That was the date on which the agency says it refused Hunt any further assistance for his undercover assignments for the White House.

The Baker report raises—but does not confirm—several new suspicions that the CIA may have known in advance of both the June 17, 1972, Watergate break-in and the Sept. 2, 1971, burglary of the offices of Dr. Lewis Fielding, a Los Angeles psychiatrist treating Pentagon Papers figure Daniel Ellsberg.

CIA Director William E. Colby, who directed that the names of certain CIA employes and contacts be deleted from the public report, said he had hoped Baker's unprecedented investigation would convince him "that CIA had no prior knowledge of the Watergate or Ellsberg break-ins or cover-up."

The Watergate committee has stopped all its investigations and the Baker report recommended that the CIA oversight committees of the Senate and House continue the probe.

It said the agency had denied Baker's investigators—headed by Fred Thompson, the panel's Republican counsel—access to dozens of documents and witnesses it said must be obtained before definite conclusions can be reached.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., and Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., who headed separate congressional oversight probes into possible CIA-Watergate links, have said they find the Baker report unconvincing.

Watergate Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., also has said reading the Baker report fails to convince him the CIA had anything to do with the break-ins or cover-up.

The report also questioned the official CIA account of the extent of the aid given to Hunt at the request of White House advisor John D. Ehrlichman.

Jaworski Denies Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski has denied it was his idea for the Watergate grand jury to name President Nixon as an unindicted coconspirator.

"The grand jury ... and not merely the prosecutor made this important determination in the first instance," Jaworski told the Supreme Court Monday.

Jaworski and White House attorney James D. St. Clair filed final briefs with the court in preparation for arguments next Monday on the President's resistance to a lower court subpoena for potential Watergate cover-up evidence.

The grand jury's action in naming Nixon as an unindicted coconspirator is a key issue in the argument because Jaworski relied on that action in opposing efforts of presidential lawyers to quash the subpoena.

In Monday's brief, St. Clair said, "Presumably the special prosecutor advised the grand jury to make this finding, and did so with the thought that it would strengthen his hand in litigation such as the present case."

Denying that charge, Jaworski told the court, "The grand jury's determination that there is evidence that the President was one of the conspirators involved in the conspiracy ... and the government's reliance on that action ... were made in good faith."

Although St Clair reiterated an argument that a grand jury does not have power to name an incumbent President as an unindicted coconspirator, Jaworki said the jury's action was "within the legitimate sphere of constitutional authority."

In fact, said Jaworski, "It is not at all clear that an incumbent President may not be named as a defendant in a criminal indictment."

Turning to Nixon's claim of executive privilege, Jaworski said neither presidents nor their aides "ever have been assured that their communications will be maintained absolutely confidential."

Hughes Loses First Round

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Robert A. Maheu, former righthand man to Howard Hughes, won the first round of his $17.5 million defamation suit against the billionaire Monday when a federal jury ruled in Maheu's favor.

Maheu, who headed Hughes' vast Nevada gambling empire until his summary firing in 1970, waited until the four woman, two-man jury had left the courtroom before his eyes brimmed with tears and he turned to kiss his wife.

"Naturally, I am very happy at the verdict," Maheu told newsmen. "I certainly do feel it is a vindication."

Maheu sued Hughes over the billionaire's public statement in a telephonic news conference in 1972 that Maheu was "a dishonest son of a bitch and he stole me blind."

The same jury will return Oct. 8 to hear evidence and arguments on what amount of the $17.5 million Maheu should receive as damages.

Also still to be resolved is a $4.5 million counterclaim brought against Maheu by Summa Corp., the Hughes holding company and defendant in Maheu's suit.

Jury foreman Mrs. Iona Sharp, a Gardena, Calif., elementary school teacher, brought in the verdict following four months of trial and four days of deliberation.

Several factors were believed to have had a large impact on the jury, including U.S. District Court Judge Harry Pregerson's comments about Maheu before deliberations began.

Pregerson described the 56-year-old former FBI agent as a "walking paradox" and "an enigma, a puzzlement" who was able to command a $500,000 salary from Hughes while never meeting the recluse face-to-face.

Another major factor in the decision appeared to be Hughes' failure to appear personally or even give a deposition to back up his claims.

Maheu filed a $50 million breach-of-contract suit against Hughes. Then he filed the defamation suit after Hughes' remarks in the news conference.

Binghamton To New York Rail Service

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Rail service may be restored between Binghamton and New York City.

Gov. Malcolm Wilson said Monday he authorized State Transportation Commissioner Raymond Schuler to negotiate with Erie-Lackawanna Railway, which has the connecting link between the two points, and Amtrak.

In a related action, Wilson urged the federal government to speed funds to Penn Central Railroad to repair the fire-damaged railroad bridge across the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie. He said the bridge alleviates conjestion in the Northeast rail corridor and provides a direct routing into New England.

The Erie-Lackawanna travels through the counties of Broome, Delaware, Sullivan Orange and Rockland. It connects with Port Authority tube trains at Hoboken, N.J., for service into New York City. The railroad dropped its passenger service in 1966.
